LA BARRA SWORN AS PRESIDENT

MEXICO CITY, May 26.—Francisco de la Barra, until to-day Minister of Foreign Relations, to-day took the oath of office as Provisional President of the republic of Mexico.

The ceremony of inauguration, which makes de la Barra President until an extraordinary general election can be held, took place in the Chamber of Deputies. He was escorted from the palace to the chamber by the staff of ex-President Diaz.

All the distinguished personages in the capital were present. The diplomatic corps was headed by the American Ambassador, Henry L. Wilson, dean of the corps. All of the members were in full regalia.

The staff officers who escorted Senor de la Barra had resigned some time ago, but had requested the honor of attending the new Provisional President, and their request was granted. Accompanying de la Barra was General E. Huscon, who had taken the oath of office as Minister of War earlier in the day.

Porfirio Diaz, master mind and master builder of Mexico, lay dying as he dictated the letter of resignation in which he relinquished into other hands the power of President.

Farewell Note Dictated.

His farewell message, wrung from him by revolution at the decline of his life of constant struggle to erect his country into a world power, was written by a secretary. The hand that expelled the foreign invader more than a score of years ago was too feeble to hold a pen.

Physical pain tortured the body of the old President and he suffered mental anguish from what he considered the ingratitude of the people and the treachery of fellow-countrymen. But the mind that had directed the affairs of Mexico over thirty years remained clear and the forceful utterance of the statesman was unimpaired.

Perhaps the most pathetic feature was the fact that even as he framed his farewell the news of his intention had gone abroad and there penetrated to him from the streets cries of "Diaz the President is dead! Long live Citizen Diaz!"

The message, which was accompanied by the announcement that with his chief Vice-President Corral also laid down the reins of government, was handed to the President of the Chamber of Deputies late yesterday afternoon, and from the time of its presentation there were wild demonstrations of joy, carried far into the night and redoubled at dawn to-day. The letter of resignation reads:

Letter of Resignation.

Sir—The Mexican people who generously have covered me with honors, who proclaimed me as their leader during the international war, who particularly assisted me in all works undertaken to develop industry and the commerce of the republic, established its credit, gain for it the respect of the world and obtain for it an honorable position in the concert of nations, that same people, sir, has recalled its armed military hands resulting that my presence in the exercise of the supreme executive power is the cause of this insurrection.

I do not know of any fact imputable to me which could have caused this social phenomenon, but permitting, though not admitting, that I may be unwittingly culpable, such a possibility makes me the least able to reason out

YOUTH CHARGED WITH BLACK HAND PLOT AT LYNN

3,500 BOYS IN SCHOOL PARADE

The biggest parade of Boston High School cadets the city has ever seen marched through the streets to Boston Common and was reviewed by Mayor Fitzgerald. Governor Foss and the school authorities today. Thirty-five hundred boys from the nine high schools of Boston composed the five regiments in line. This was the forty-fourth annual review of the school battalion.

The schoolboys were cheered and applauded all along the line. Their parents and feminine classmates lined the parade route. Business men, clerks and others stopped work while the parade passed to cheer the future men of Boston.

The girls were especially enthusiastic. Gaily dressed and waving school flags, the groups of smiling girls contrasted prettily with the martial look of the boys, who strode along sturdily.

From a military point the boys made a fine showing. They marched in masterly fashion. Their uniforms and accoutrements were clean and bright. The officers in charge of the different regiments and companies gave commands briskly, and the whole parade moved along like a unit. As a spectacle and as a tactical demonstration the parade was highly satisfactory.

The parade formed on Clarendon street, near Columbus avenue, at 9.30. The line of march was Columbus, avenue, Park square, Boylston, Tremont, Bromfield, Washington, School and Beacon streets to the Common, where the parade disbanded. At the head of the line was Colonel George H. Benyon, military instructor.

The five young colonels, in charge of the five regiments, acted as brigadier-generals of the parade. Two colonels divided the

U. S. CORPORAL SPOHR SENTENCED TO DIE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 26.—Standing at attention and without a flicker of eyelid, Corporal Lawrence Spohr, forty-five years of age, of the United States Coast Artillery, heard Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins to-day sentence him to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison during the week beginning July 31. Spohr was found guilty of the murder of his sweetheart, Rose O'Toole, at White Plains, on the night of April 1.

BOY HELD FOR BLACK HAND NOTE

On the charge that he wrote a letter to Alden B. Sleeper, a rich manufacturer of Swampscott, demanding $1,000 for the removal of which he would have the blood of his two sons, Charles Bachelder, seventeen years old, of Swampscott, was trapped by the police and arrested early today after they had laid in wait for him since midnight Wednesday.

The police say Bachelder has confessed and admits that he was alone in the scheme.

Young Bachelder was arraigned in the Lynn court before Judge Sweetser. He was charged with attempted blackmail through the writing of a "Black Hand" letter. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $500 bail for a hearing on Wednesday next.

Police Chief Carson of Swampscott asked that the bail be made much larger, but Judge Sweetser said that that amount would be sufficient to keep the prisoner in custody.

Sought Another Suspect.

Immediately after Bachelder had been held, Chief Carson, accompanied by Mr. Sleeper and Inspector Murray of the Lynn force, jumped in an auto and went to West Lynn to look for another person, who, it is said, was implicated.

The letter sent Mr. Sleeper follows:

Alden Sleeper—If you do not put $1,000, spot cash, at the bridge over the State Road, Wednesday, 21st, 1911, at 12 p. m., midnight, something you won't like is liable to happen to you or your family.

Step down at the granite on the left hand side of the bridge and place money in pocketbook on one of the lower beams so that it cannot be seen from top of bridge.

Railroad track goes over bridge to Marblehead. Tell no one of this letter; no even to your wife and if you fail to put money there, serious consequences are liable to happen you.

This is a genuine Blackhand society, and you know what dynamite can do. Bring no police or escorts with you. If you do we will find out and will kill your son.

Beware! Don't try to fool us, as it will do no good, but will get yourself in trouble.

We can get a sweet revenge if you do not.

HOAR-GRIFFIN ORDER DEFEATED IN HOUSE

By a voice vote that was almost unanimous, the House to-day defeated the Hoar-Griffin order asking the Supreme Court if the bill to extend Boylston street across the Back Bay Fens did not become law without Governor Foss's signature. The point has been raised that the Governor's veto of the measure might have been unintentionally improper, because the veto message contained no objection to the bill. Debate on the question of passing the measure over the veto has been assigned to the House for next Wednesday.

SCORE OF BOXERS OUT TO TACKLE JOHNSON

NEW YORK, May 26.—More than a score of austere heavyweights who aspire to wrest the fighting crown from the dusky brow of Champion Jack Johnson, will enter the ring to-night at the "White Hope" carnival at the National Sporting Club. The entrants came from both the United States and Canada, and range in weight from 200 to 300 pounds.

AT LAST

CHURCH DYING, SAYS CRAPSEY

Dr. Algernon S. Crapsey said that Protestantism would be dead by the end of the century, in his address in Ford Hall to-day, at the forty-fourth annual meeting of the Free Religious Association of America, and he also said that the Protestant church is bankrupt intellectually, and cannot get decent men to serve it. Some of his statements were:

"The tendency today is out of all churches into the great company of unchurchgoers. There is no need of carrying religion to Chinese, who will soon be showing that we are barbarians in our methods. The doctrine of evolution has taken the place of the doctrine of creation. There are sixty millions of people in America who do not go to church.

Dr. Crapsey is the Episcopal clergyman who was deposed by Bishop Walker of the Central New York diocese because of his heretical views. The association to-day re-elected Rev. Dr. Charles W. Wendte of Boston as president, and also chose William H. Hamlin of Cambridge as secretary and J. A. J. Wilcox of Melrose as treasurer.

ORPHANAGE IS DEDICATED.

HARTFORD, May 26.—Arsenault, which was given as a home for widows or orphans of clergymen of the Episcopal Church by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Colt, was dedicated this afternoon by simple services under the direction of Bishop Brewster of Connecticut.

BOSTON MEN IN YOGI LOVES

ALBION, Me., May 26.—Prominent Boston men who fear that their identity may be revealed are having to submit to the strange Hindu cult formed by Mr. and Mrs. Ole Bull of Cambridge, and who are said to have participated in the weird ceremonies that drove some of the women members insane, have sent a lawyer to the Bull with counsel to protect their interests.

Boston men and women are known, but who have not been mentioned in connection with the astonishing revelations that have been made, are said to have been attracted by the oriental philosophy that was preached by the long-robed swamis and priests who came to Lambpage from India and made their home for a time with Mrs. Bull.

The attorney who is here in the interest of some of them is Arthur H. Brooks of Boston. He declined to-day to say whom he represented, remarking suggestively:

"This case is likely to lead in almost any direction at any time and I am here to take care of my clients if cases if necessary."

Miss Siri Swanander, a Swedish girl of twenty, who lives in Brooklyn, was called to the witness stand to-day. It was said that Mrs. Bull took some sort of a case at the death bed of Dr. Jayne's death Was this so, refusing to see none only eight days before she died?

A letter written by Mrs. Bull to her brother, Joseph Dorg, who married a daughter of the poet Longfellow, indicated that there was a hot contest between Miss Sarah Jane Farmer, the founder of the Greenacre conference, for the leadership of the body. Mr. Whipple asked Mr. Thorp:

Q.—Did you know that after a year's struggle that Dr. Jayne died?

This question was objected to and Mr. Whipple asked this:

Q.—Did you ever hear Mrs. Bull express the belief that Dr. Jayne's death was the result of the exercise of malign, physical powers on those opposed to him? A.—Never.

Q.—Were the lectures of the Swamis delivered in Mrs. Bull's house? A.—No.

Q.—Were these conferences of which the people have formed a part held in Mrs. Bull's house? A.—Part of the time.

SUNDAY'S AMERICAN

MELLEN ROAD AND BIG MILK TRUST ACCUSED

Seven of the largest milk contractors of Boston were to-day indicted by the United States Grand Jury under the Sherman anti-trust statute, the charge being virtually that they had organized a monopoly in restraint of trade in New England.

At the same time the New Haven Railroad corporation and the Ellis Farm Milk Company were both accused by the Grand Jury of giving and accepting rebates in the shipments of milk between Boston and Connecticut.

The men indicted under the Sherman Act are:

Isaac Whiting, George Whiting and and John K. Whiting (D. Whiting & Sons).

Charles H. Hood and Edward J. Hood (H. P. Hood & Sons).

William A Granstein (Boston Dairy Company).

William A. Hunter (secretary Boston Co-operative Milk Producers' Association).

NEW HAVEN R. R. COMPANY CHARGED WITH REBATING

The Federal Grand Jury to-day returned indictments against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad for alleged violations of the Elkins law, which forbids rebating. The indictments were reported to Judge Dodge. The Ellis Farm Milk Company was indicted along with the New Haven Road. The railroad is charged with handing rebates and the milk corporation with accepting them.

The indictments against the railroad are ridiculous. The joint indictments against the New Haven and the Ellis Farm Company embrace sixty counts, charging thirty specific cases of violations of the Elkins act.

The Grand Jury has been investigating the complaint against the railroad since its session in April. The evidence seem to result in Attorney General Wickersham, and said here Being Washington for the purpose.

Charges against the New Haven Railroad were the transportation of milk between Willimantic, Ct., and Boston, free, equal to the Ellis Farm concern. Ellis Farm sent the milk regularly every day and the shipments of milk from Willimantic to Boston over the New Haven Haven, but the alleged acceptance of rebates from the New Haven. This is the first case of milk rebating in New England charged against the New Haven road.

TO-DAY IS QUEEN MARY'S BIRTHDAY

LONDON, May 26.—Today is the Queen's birthday and the closing day for the coronation birthday gift to the Queen from the Mayor of the Empire. Sums ranging from a pound to a penny have been contributed by Marys all over the world, the rich and the poor, the aged and the half. A substantial sum was realized.

O'CONNOR, JR., IS BOOSTING FATHER

Six young Sunday baseball enthusiasts led by Eugene J. O'Connor, Jr., called on Governor Foss at the State House to-day with a petition for the appointment of Eugene J. O'Connor, Sr., as Police Commissioner of Boston. The petition contained 150,000 names, more or less, according to

7 LEADING BOSTON MILK CONTRACTORS ARE INDICTED

The Federal Grand Jury today indicted the seven leading milk contractors of Boston, charging, in effect, that they constitute a Milk Trust, which is controlling the entire milk supply consumed in Boston. Indictments were returned against the following dealers:

Isaac Whiting.
George Whiting.
Charles H. Hood.
Edward J. Hood.
John K. Whiting.
William A. Granstein.
William A. Hunter.

The men indicted as individuals comprise the firms of Ic Whiting & Sons; H. P. Hood & Sons, and the Boston Dairy Company.

The indictments are returned under the Sherman Anti-Trust law. It was under the law that the Standard Oil Company was found to be a monopoly in restraint of trade.

The indictments against the so-called Boston Milk Trust came as a complete surprise. It had not been known that the Federal government officials in Boston had been planning to destroy the monopoly the farmers and milk producers throughout New England who supply the market have been openly declaring during the past year or two that they were in the hands of the Boston Milk Trust which bought its milk where it pleased and paid the price it pleased.

One bill against the milk dealers charges them with engaging in a conspiracy in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The other bill does not charge conspiracy, but, according to its terms, the dealers are accused of engaging in a combination in violation of the Sherman law.

The alleged offences of the milk dealers cover a period of six years. The government claims that the men have engaged in an unlawful combination in restraint of trade and commerce among the several States of the United States by establishing, planning and agreeing together throughout the following States: Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Connecticut. The dealers are also accused of getting together on prices of shipments that went to Boston, Charlestown, Cambridge, Somerville, Lynn, Beverly, Salem and Worcester.

BLACK HAND SOCIETY.

A skull and crossbones was drawn below the letter.

Mr. Sleeper was greatly frightened when he received the threatening letter. He took it at once to Police Chief Corson of Swampscott and they talked the matter over. Sleeper could not suggest any one who might have been the author of the letter.

Caught After Long Vigil.

Chief Corson advised him to put some money in a letter and leave it at the place specified. This was done and then practically all of the Swampscott police force men were detailed to watch the pocketbook, but their vigils were fruitless until 5 a. m. to-day.

Policemen Eugene T. Brogan and James Phenan were on the lookout for the letter writer when they say they saw Bachelder appear at the spot where the money had been left and pick up the pocketbook and start off with it.

The policemen grabbed the young man. He declared that there was no reason why he should have been arrested. After Chief Corson had talked with him he became convinced that at least one other person was mixed up in the matter.

Young Bachelder was taken to the Lynn police station and placed in a cell to await the opening of court. The prisoner was seen in his cell by a reporter for the AMERICAN. He made this statement:

"Nothing on Me."

"They haven't anything on me. They think they're smart, but I'll fool them in the long run.

"It happened to be down near the railroad track and they accused me of picking up the pocketbook. That's all there is to it.

"Everybody at Swampscott knows that I've been on the level, but the cops want to put me in bad. I don't want my parents to hear of this, because it will make them feel badly."

Mr. Sleeper was formerly in business at No. 63 South street, but removed to Peabody three months ago.

Alden B Sleeper was sued for $100,000 by Fred M. Haley of Lynn for the alienation of his wife's affections five years ago. Mrs. Haley, a beautiful young woman, was the daughter of Mrs. Charles Leighton of No. 849 Beacon street, Boston.

It was told at the time that the suit preceded a thrashing Mr. Haley gave the wealthy leather merchant on finding him in a Back Bay apartment with his wife. Haley filed an attachment of $100,000 against Sleeper, on November 20, 1908. Mrs. Haley left for an extended trip to Europe. The case was settled without coming to trial.

HUSTLE DAYS IN GREAT CONTEST

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Five days more for the May special!

Five days more before the next list closes.

The time for candidates in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest to bear in mind now is next Wednesday, May 31, at 10 p. m.

That marks the close of the special May offer, with its forty-two prizes, aggregating $1,050 in value.

That hour brings, also, the closing of the polls for the next list of candidates' standing with vote totals.

The May special is the final offer in the whole contest.

The next list, to be published on Sunday, June 11, is the final one before the close of the main contest.

Candidates must HUSTLE now if ever. The prizes in the May special, beginning with a $500 Homer speed power boat, are too desirable to be lost without extra effort.

It is necessary, too, to rank high in the next list of standing, so as to force your campaign to the limit before the finish. The whole contest comes to a close on June 15, four days after the next list appears.

Beyond all this, there is the approaching finish of the main contest. So votes and especially subscriptions count with telling force now.

Here are the terms of that May special offer:

Forty-two prizes, aggregating $1,050 in value, are offered to the forty-two candidates polling the most votes By SUBSCRIPTION between May 1 and May 31, up to 10 p. m., inclusive.

Governor Foss will receive to-day a petition from the Women's South End Homestead Association, urging the appointment of Mrs. Charlotte Smith as successor to Police Commissioner O'Meara. LITTLEFIELD TRIAL BEGINS

NEWPORT, May 26.—The murder trial of ex-Senator Frank Littlefield of New Shoreham, Block Island, who is charged with clubbing his mother, Mrs. Ann Elizabeth Littlefield, to death on April 12 last, began today before Judge Robert M. Franklin in the District Court room in the Old State House. The defense is preparing to set up an alibi.

The courtroom was crowded to capacity, there being many spectators in addition to a large array of witnesses and court officials.

The witnesses included members of the Littlefield, Dodge, Sprague and other families who are reckoned among the "first settlers" of the district.

Harry Parsons Cross, assistant district attorney, is in charge of the prosecution. Frank F. Nolan of this city is senior counsel for the defense.

Littlefield came into court accompanied by his wife. He was recently released from Newport jail on $10,000 bail. The case has been continued since Littlefield was arraigned last month and pleaded not guilty.

VEDRINE WINS RACE TO MADRID

MADRID, May 26.—The most thrilling air race in the history of aviation came to a successful end here to-day when M. Pierre Vedrine soared into Madrid at 0 minutes after 4 o'clock and landed gracefully in the aerodrome at Getafe, winning the Paris-to-Madrid contest which started so tragically at Issy last Sunday when General Berteaux was killed by a runaway monoplane.

A great crowd, hundreds of whom had remained up all night to witness the end of the race, was gathered at the aerodrome. King Alfonso and Queen Victoria congratulated the daring aviator upon his exploit.

Unless the protest of Louis Bleriot, the French aeroplane manufacturer, stands, Vedrine wins the $20,000 prize offered by the Paris newspaper Petit Parisian, a $10,000 prize offered by the Spanish Aero Club and a special trophy donated by the Spanish King. There is little likelihood now that Bleriot will press his protest.

Gilbert, who was held up a few miles outside of San Sebastian while attempting the third leg of the journey yesterday, arrived shortly after Vedrine and was greeted with enthusiasm no less than that which welcomed the winner.

No Aviator Injured.

The journey was made in three consecutive legs, the first from Paris to Angouleme, the second from Angouleme to San Sebastian in the Spanish capital.

A unique record was established by the fact that no aviator met serious injury. One new record was established by Vedrine in his flight to Angouleme from Paris, making the 279 miles in three hours and forty-three minutes, setting up a new mark for cross country aeroplane speed.

Gilbert's arrival was unexpected. After traversing the most dangerous part of the third stage, over rugged mountain country, he had been compelled to land yesterday because of a broken motor and had announced then that he would not complete the journey. However, he managed to get his machine repaired and suddenly decided to finish the flight. The story of his battle with a mouster gray eagle, high over the peaks of the Cantabrian mountains had preceded him and gave a thrilling touch to his part in the contest. He was cheered to an echo as he stepped from his machine and journalists crowded around him asking for his own story of the battle in the clouds.

Suffered from the Cold.

Vedrine declared that the race just finished was the most thrilling chapter in his career. He gave a graphic description of his sensations while flying over the mountains and over a leg of the Bay of Biscay. At times, he said, the air was so cold that he thought he would have to descend, while at other times the fog was so dense that he could not see the earth and had to steer by instinct. The shifting air currents that lurk over the mountain regions of the French and Spanish frontiers gave him a great deal of trouble and he was compelled at times to ascend to such an altitude that he could barely see the forests glimmering far below.

Vedrine, Gilbert and Garros were the only three out of the sixteen original entrants who got as far as the terminus of the first leg of the journey. That was the easiest section of the flight. Their troubles did not start until the airmen struck the northern Spanish frontier. It was there that Gilbert got lost in the fog and drove his aeroplane for two hours over the Bay of Biscay before he could get his bearings. He landed at Biarritz, after losing considerable time.

Vedrine Always in the Lead.

Vedrine led throughout the race. He was first into Angouleme and first into San Sebastian. He declared that if his motors had worked properly, he would have been able to make the long and dangerous flight within a dozen hours.

The two aeroplanes were wheeled out into the field at the Getafe aerodrome and a troop of soldiers had to be thrown around them to keep the enthusiastic Spaniards from tearing them to pieces for souvenirs. The two intrepid airmen were the heroes of the hour.

After Gilbert's unexpected arrival the people began to look for Garros, who had reached Tolosa, fifteen minutes from San Sebastian, when his motor began to go wrong, and he had his machine hauled back into San Sebastian. It was not announced whether he would make another attempt to reach the capital or not.

Vedrine was so benumbed from the cold that he had to be assisted from his aeroplane. He was taken to a hospital and given a massage and quickly revived.

MISS FARNHAM, WHO WILL WED ON TOP OF MONUMENT

BEATRICE FARNHAM

WEDDING ALTAR 550 FEET IN AIR

GRAND JUNCTION, Col., May 26.—The oddest wedding ever known in western Colorado. This is the plan of Miss Beatrice Farnham, a South Weymouth, Mass., artist, also known as the "New England cowgirl," and John Otto, the architect of Monument Canyon. They will be married at the topmost point of Independence Monument.

Independence Monument is 550 feet high and rises at the entrance of the canyon. Nobody has climbed to the top, although Otto made an attempt last Summer to raise a flag on the pinnacle. For his marriage he has commenced building a ladder of iron spikes, which are driven into the side of the mountain. These will lead to the very top, and already the hermit has the primitive stairway half completed.

John Otto has made his home in Monument Canyon for many years. Last Winter Miss Farnham came here from her home to paint views of the canyon. She was guided around by Otto and a warm friendship sprung up between them. She left for her home in the East and upon her return recently the engagement was announced. In lieu of an engagement ring Mr. Otto presented his future bride with a small pack burro, which has won fame as the homeliest animal in this part of the State.

Miss Beatrice Farnham is an artist formerly of South Weymouth, who went West to get local color into her pictures of Indians and western life.

CAT STARTS ON LONG JOURNEY

"Bacon" started to-day from Cleveland, traveling first-class and accompanied by a paid guardian, to rejoin in Brooklyn Mrs. F. S. Stevens of No. 18 Davis Avenue. Bacon's mistress is preparing to welcome him warmly for he has been absent four months.

Bacon's journey, believed to be the most remarkable ever taken by a cat head of fancy stock, is the result of an illness which overtook him while Mrs. Stevens was coming here from her former home in Little Rock, Ark. He became so ill on the train that when Mrs. Stevens and her husband got to Cleveland it became necessary to seek a doctor.

This specialist, Dr. Stainforth, said the cat was suffering from general debility and recommended that it spend some time at his sanitarium for animals. Although loth to part with Bacon, Mrs. Stevens left him there. A short time ago she received word that her pet was fully recovered.

HELEN HARTNETT OF HAVERHILL, WHO HAS DISAPPEARED

HAVERHILL, May 26.—With the purpose of devoting his life to recovering his daughter, whom he believes to have been kidnaped, James F. Hartnett has given up his work in order to be free to prosecute the search. Finding fourteen-year-old Helen more than his farm simply restoring the child to the family circle, for it was she who brought about Hartnett's reconciliation with his wife, from whom he had become estranged.

Helen Hartnett vanished mysteriously three months ago just after her parents had brought Mr. and Mrs. Hartnett together following a short separation that was the result of a misunderstanding. In order to follow up supposed clues to her whereabouts, the father went to Chelsea to work for a time and then went on to Lynn, but he has now decided that it will be necessary to devote all his time to the hunt for his daughter.

REPORT GRANT IS FOUND 'HERETIC'

ATLANTIC CITY, May 26.—It is stated on good authority that the Rev. Dr. William D. Grant of Northumberland, Pa., has been voted guilty of heresy by the Judicial Commission of the Presbyterian General Assembly. The verdict was reached after many hours of stormy discussion.

The commission, by its head, Moderator Carries, will report to the General Assembly, recommending censure and suspension, excommunication will not be demanded. Dr. Grant, it is said, will be given an opportunity to return to the Presbyterian, provided he recants.

Dr. Grant's conviction as reported has caused no end of surprise. His acquittal, or a verdict of mild censure, was the worst expected. There is talk among his friends of opposing the verdict on the floor of the General Assembly and demanding his exoneration.

Awaiting a report on Dr. Grant's trial the General Assembly turned its attention to the cases of the Rev. Dr. Frances Brown, president of the Union Theological Seminary, and the Rev. Dr. William A. Brown, professor of systematic theology in the seminary.

"No Defiance of Authority."

"Neither in the occasion nor the place of the utterances nor in the phraseology," said a report of the committee which investigated the charges of heresy against the Browns, "is there anything to suggest defiance of the authority of this assembly."

In the address of the Rev. Dr. Francis Brown there is nothing to indicate a departure from the standards of the church, nor is there any reference to any of the deliverances of the assembly. In the case of the Rev. Dr. William Brown, his utterances are susceptible of misunderstanding and tend to impair confidence in his faith. But since the publication of these articles he has been at pains to correct such misunderstandings and has accepted the historic Christianity and the deity of Christ, and has declared his dependence on the atoning sacrifice of Christ.

Summing up these findings the committee discovered in the articles of the Browns "no sufficient reason for diverting the church from its great work" and urged that no action be taken against the clergymen, adding that the "peace and harmony of the church should not lightly be disturbed."

A tumultuous scene followed the reading of the report. A half-dozen clergymen clamored for recognition, uttering protests. The report was referred back to committee with the expressed hope that the "final action be fair and in accord with the will of God."

This action followed the attempt of the Rev. Dr. Edwin J. Reinke of Philadelphia to amend the report so as to provide that action be taken against the Rev. Dr. Francis Brown and that Rev. Dr. William Brown be "admonished to desist from dissemination of views in apparent contradiction of the doctrines of the church." Dr. Reinke, in advocating a reprimand for Dr. William Brown, read this extract from an article by the latter:

"Sin Not a Foreign Intruder."

"Sin is not a foreign intruder, making its appearance in the universe suddenly at any moment of time and bringing about an abrupt transfiguration in human nature as a whole. Sin is the inevitable result of certain tendencies, inwrought into the structure of human nature. It is the survival of the animal in man, his failure to rise to the higher capacities within him.

"So salvation is not an act wrought once for all in some transcendent realm. It is a process going on through the ages, and rooted as truly as sin itself in the nature of man. Atonement is not the great exception; it is the universal law of all true living. Calvary is a principle as well as an event. As Horace Bushnell, one of the greatest of new theologians, has put it: 'A cross has been among the perfections of God from all eternity.' So under other names, justification and sanctification, are experiences found outside of Christianity. The church is not composed of exiles from the world; it is the first fruits of the society that is to be. Jesus is not (God and man; he is God in man, the first born among many brethren, but the type to which all mankind is ultimately destined to conform."

IS NEW ENGLAND TOO EASY ON HORSE THIEVES?

Does that make you laugh? "Shucks! We have no horse thieves in New England!"

Is that what you say, mister? You are dead wrong.

$25,000 worth of horses are stolen in New England every year and never recovered!

$25,000 worth of stolen horses are brought into New England from New York and New Jersey!

Where these horses come from and go to, how they are taken away in the night, where the thieves hang out—all of these things, and others forming a master-of-fact story more thrilling than fiction—will be told in detail in THE BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

MORSE READS TAFT'S REFUSAL

ATLANTA, Ga., May 26.—Charles W. Morse learned that President Taft had refused to pardon him when he entered the library at the Federal Penitentiary to take up his daily work. Morse is an assistant in the library, and the first thing he does every morning is to file the papers that come in the early mail. As Morse stepped to the table on which the mail was lying his eye fell on the first page of the Atlanta morning paper, on which under big headlines appeared the decision against him by the President of the United States.

Morse seemed dazed at first, but quickly recovered and read the article. When he came to the paragraphs in which Taft denounced him as worse than Welsh Morse indicated his dissent. When he had finished reading he stood in an attitude of deep dejection, but only for a moment. Then he sniffed and went about his duties.

All through the day he showed that he keenly felt the strictures which the President had passed upon him.

"But I have not lost hope," Morse said to the prison chaplain. "Justice will yet be done me, and the fight for freedom will be continued. Yes, I am disappointed; but I feel more keenly for my wife than I do for myself. It is hard on her, after the brave fight she has made for me, to meet with this disappointment. I want to see her and comfort her and tell her that everything will eventually come out all right."

PLAN TRIBUTE TO GIBBONS

BALTIMORE, May 26.—Practically all details for the popular civic celebration in honor of Cardinal Gibbons to be held on June 6, have been perfected by the committee in charge of the arrangements.

It was agreed to make the affair a national function, and in addition to extending invitations to President Taft, Vice-President Sherman and Ex-President Roosevelt, all the judges of the Supreme Court, foreign ambassadors, Governors of all the States and the Mayors of the leading cities will be invited.

The demonstration will be nonsectarian and is designed as a recognition of the influence which he has exercised for high ideals in citizenship and patriotism.

SUFFRAGISTS AT MAY DINNER

"It is absolutely true that there is less to be said against granting suffrage to women than there was to be said against freeing the slaves," said Professor A. H. Hatton of Western Reserve University at the annual May dinner of the New England Woman's Suffrage Association in the Twentieth Century Club quarters.

He said the greatest reason he wanted women to have the ballot was for the influence it would have on the women themselves. It might give them something more worthy to do than spending their time at bridge whist or pink teas.

JESSE POMEROY'S LETTERS TO HIS mother in Sunday's AMERICAN.

YELLOW COAT ON HALF A HOUSE

Hi, say, Hold Top, 'ave you seen the 'arf-'n-'arf 'ouse hout in Waltham?

Hit's 'arf yellow hand 'arf brown.

Coming down to plain U. S. A., there is a "half-and-half" house at No. 53 Charles street in the City of Waltham. It isn't in honor of King George's coronation, either. It's yellow half-way up and down because Mrs. Bridget Maloney wished her half of the dwelling painted that way.

It's dull, weather-beaten brown on the other half because John Kelly, half-owner, did not wish to paint his share of the structure.

The yellow and brown combination gives the residence a motley appearance that is one of the latest items in a "Seeing Waltham" trip.

It is not uncommon to see a house painted in different colors for different stories. Some people like a first story of red, a second story of Helen pink and the attic and roof of Vandyke brown.

But the up and down division of coloring is a new one in architectural decoration.

This house was built jointly by John Kelly and the late Martin Maloney. On Mr. Maloney's death his widow inherited his half of the property. The house was painted brown in 1904. The brown withstood the weather well. Mr. Kelly, according to Mrs. Maloney, thinks there is plenty of wear left in the seventeen-year-old paint still.

Mrs. Maloney wished to have the whole house repainted. Mr. Kelly, who does not occupy his half of the house, did not wish to. Failing to attain an agreement with Mr. Kelly, Mrs. Maloney went ahead and had her half painted a shade of yellow that pleased her eye.

Mrs. Maloney is satisfied with her half in its new yellow coat. When she goes by the house she looks at her half and closes her eyes to the Kelly half.

EXPLOSION ON LAUNCH DRIVES SIX ASHORE

Explosion of a can of gasoline aboard a thirty-foot launch, moored to a raft near the Salem street bridge, on the Charles River in Watertown, set fire to the craft, sent three men and three girls, who were aboard her, scrambling for safety, and caused the calling out of the Watertown fire department. Charles Bent of Watertown, owner of the launch, was tinkering at the engine when the can exploded. The firemen were forced to jump the fence and slide down the embankment on to the raft to get to the fire.

Memorial Day

On Tuesday next a country purged of human slavery will pay her tribute to the memory of those who answered the call of Father Abraham.

In every churchyard throughout our broad land there sleeps someone who marched under the Stars and Stripes—erect—virile—patriotic.

With heads bowed—feeble steps—and hearts aching with the memories of those fearful days—the remnants of the Grand Army of the Republic will march to the tune of "Rest, Soldier, Rest," and put the little flags and garlands on the graves of their comrades.

DECORATION SPECIAL

In order to make this occasion especially fitting in its floral appointments for everybody wishing to decorate the graves of their dear ones, we have designed a special wreath of genuine Southern Magnolia leaves and prepared waxed natural roses (or lilies) and fern—like illustration.

This wreath will keep out of doors for two months or longer—retaining its original lustre and beauty.

The price for wreath—express prepaid to any address in New England, securely packed in heavy box—is $2.50.

Orders by mail for one or more wreaths should be accompanied by check or money order, with shipping directions and date for shipment. We regret that our supply is limited, and suggest that orders be sent at once.

ASTOR PEACOCK RIOT AT BALL

LONDON, May 26.—If Mrs. Ava Willing Astor desired to cause a sensation at the ball given by Lord Winchilsea in honor of the coronation of June, she had her wish, although perhaps not in just the way she had imagined.

The great ball room at Claridge's was well filled when Mrs. Astor, clad in pink gauze with a mantle of turquoise blue and leading a live peacock by a gilded chain, swept into the room. She wore a classic crown of gold, carried a long gilded staff and wore sandals which showed her bare feet.

Her progress down the room was a triumph, shared by the peacock, which spread its tail proudly and seemed fully aware of the attention it was attracting. Suddenly the bird became frightened at the lights of the room and the sensation of the evening began. Shrieking wildly it broke away and ran about the room, frightening the women so that several of them seemed about to faint. Lord Falconer proved himself a hero. Assisted by other men, he captured the bird and enclosed it in a stockade built of gilt chairs. The bird was quiet for a few minutes and Mrs. Astor went to dance, while Lord Falconer stalled guard.

Left alone, the peacock became lonesome and, despite Lord Falconer's attempts to restrain it, clambered over the chairs and started for the dancing space.

"Tally-ho!" shouted some one, and the hunt was up. The bird ran among the dancers and was kicked and trampled until it was nearly dead before some of the hunters grabbed it. Then it was hurriedly put in an empty champagne case and carried out. It was turned over to a footman, who carried it back to the dealer in Soho from whom Mrs. Astor hired it.

ROSLIN FISH, FAMOUS MODEL, WHO WAS KILLED

ROSLIN FISH.

FAMOUS MODEL DIES IN POVERTY

The pathetic irony of an artists' model whose fame interfered with his getting sufficient engagements is found in the story of Roslin Fish of Melrose, who was killed by being crushed under a steam roller.

Boston artists, who had utilized the venerable man as a model for old age studies, said to-day that Mr. Fish became so well known, from his striking features, that they could not use him again and again.

Arthur Copeland, the painter, expressed the sad situation when he said:

"Mr. Fish was a splendid model. But he was so well known by this time that I could not use him often. He had posed for me and for other artists. His face had appeared on advertising pictures and posters. Then, he only posed, of course, for studies of old men of the New England or the sea-faring type. I could not use him as often as I would have liked to on account of his face being so familiar to the public.

No Work for Him.

"Only a few weeks ago Mr. Fish called at my studio and asked me if I had a posing for him. I told him that I could pose him again some time, I did not know just when. He was one of the best models in his line that I ever had. I am greatly grieved at his death, especially under such distressing circumstances."

Scott Clifton Carlose, the artist, has only praise for Roslin Fish.

"I used Mr. Fish often as a model," says Mr. Carlose, "he was splendid in his line. He knew how to pose and his features were just the kindly, lovable type that appeals to one."

One of the last engagements as model which Mr. Fish had was to flatter H. Burgess, the artist whose work is seen particularly in The Youth's Companion.

"Three months ago," said Mr. Burgess, "I had Mr. Fish pose for me for a drawing to illustrate the story 'The Remembered Grave.' He was a fine model for the old man type. He not only was all that could be wished in form and features, but he aided the artist through his intelligent understanding. Mr. Fish had the artistic temperament, which is necessary to the best posing. Personally he was a lovable man. I was shocked when I heard how he had died."

Slain by Steam Roller.

Through lack of engagements as a model, owing to his being too familiar to the public, Mr. Fish was compelled to earn money for himself and his wife by manual labor. Though only fifty-four years old, he was unable to do hard work. He was employed by the Melrose Street Department for three years, but was laid off three weeks ago on account of his physical disabilities. Then he was hired by the Public Works Department to carry the warning flag ahead of the steam roller used by the department.

The old man accepted this lowly task cheerfully. Though he did not complain it must have galled him to be reduced to that humble duty when his features were famous in the realm of art.

He has smiled at the public from magazine pages, both advertising and vending sections. Everyone knows the advertisement of the old bookkeeper endorsing a certain brand of ink. The old bookkeeper is Roslin Fish.

Another well-known advertisement shows him as a weather-beaten sailor.

On the evening of his death Mr. Fish was weakened by his long hours of plodding just ahead of the slow-going steam roller. At 7 o'clock the big machine was being driven to the public works building in Melrose for the night. Pedestrians noticed the old fragment stumbling along just in front of the roller. Some one warned him to be careful.

The worn-out model lagged more and more. Finally the roller hit one of his heels. He stumbled. The roller crushed his foot, then his legs and crushed him to the thighs. He was dead by the time a temporary stretcher was brought.

WIFE DIVORCES LE GALLIENNE

NEW YORK, May 26.—Although in court under subpoena, Richard Le Gallienne, the poet, did not oppose his wife's divorce suit when it came to trial.

RENEW SUNDAY BASEBALL WAR

AFTER THE GRIP

If You Do Not Recover Your Usual Health Try This Treatment.

For three years after an attack of the grip Mrs. C. B. Pierce, of South Britain, Conn., was in poor health and found no relief until she built up her blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says:

"I attribute my sickness directly to an attack of the grip. I had fainting spells, which came on me without warning. I would faint away while sitting in a chair or lying in bed. After recovering from them I would be deathly sick for a week or so. I became so much worse that I began to have two or three fainting spells a day. These spells so weakened me that I had scarcely enough strength to get around. My limbs would become swollen especially at night. My sleep was broken for I was extremely nervous and apprehensive of some impending danger. I had severe headaches most of the time and a darting pain over my left eye which affected the whole side of my head. I was troubled with neuralgic pains around my heart and was frequently confined to my bed.

"During two years of my sickness I was treated at different times by three doctors. Their treatment did not afford me relief so I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. A few boxes of the pills gave me much benefit. My headaches became less severe and I began to feel better in every way. I gave the pills a good trial and was completely cured. I am in good health now and praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they undoubtedly saved me from years of suffering."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have also cured anemia, chlorosis, general debility, rheumatism and after-effects of fevers and should be given a trial wherever a tonic for the blood and nerves is needed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are always the same and are sold only in packages bearing the well-known trade-mark and are guaranteed by the manufacturers to contain no opiate, narcotic or anything that could injure the most delicate system.

The genuine are sold by all druggists or will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," containing fuller information will be sent free upon request.

We Don't Sell "Holiday" Suits

Our suits are the all-summer-long kind with good looks and good service for every day they're worn, whether holiday or work day, weekday or Sunday—not made for any special occasion, but specially made for all occasions.

You may spend too little for a suit that makes you a prince for a day and and a pauper thereafter. Or, you may over-pay on the strength of some way-up tailor's name—and wonder later just what the money went for.

It's better to steer a middle course. Let us put a suit on your back—not for the Holiday alone, but for all summer—a suit that will give you months of solid service and satisfaction, at a price which leaves enough money in your pocket to pay you many times over for the trouble of coming "A Little Out of the Way."

There are profits in the clothing business which are not written with the dollar sign. One of them is the Good Will of the Public. We are trying to win it by deserving it.

The House of Kuppenheimer

That name identifies what we believe to be the finest clothing produced—clothing that is unswervingly honest down to the last thread of virgin wool, that has the style, set and hang that all men want, yet too often fail to get.

That's why Kuppenheimer Clothes keep their good shape and good looks and give satisfaction from first to last. We have them here—case after case full—in all styles and sizes for all sorts of men. But whatever the style—whatever the price—the QUALITY is RIGHT—and STAYS right.

MARTIN AFTER HEARST PRIZE

Professor James V. Martin, vice-president of the Harvard Aeronautical Society, who is returning from England to take part in the aerial meet at Waltham, has sent word to Boston friends that after the Waltham meet he will make a try for the $50,000 prize, offered by William Randolph Hearst, for the first coast-to-coast flight. Mr. Martin, it is said, intends starting on the cross-continent trip soon after the Waltham meet ends on June 15.

Cromwell Dixon expects to make a flight to-day from the new Mets Field at Waltham, if weather conditions permit. Dixon has his Standard-Curtis biplane tuned up for a trial flight.

Practically all of the aeroplanes flying here now have been in a Herot monoplane but the experience of these trips gives him confidence that he will be able to fly the new machine without trouble.

Dixon has watched the construction of the motor that is to be used in this machine and stated that he would go into the air to-day with every confidence.

SOUTH BOSTON EXCITED OVER PIRATE GOLD

HEIR TO COLLIER MILLIONS.

PITTSFIELD, May 26.—By the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. David T. Dunn of No. 3 Lenox Villa, Birchwood, there is a new heir to the Collier millions. The boy is the only grandson of Mrs. W. Dwight Collier of New York.

SEEK KID GOLD ON CASTLE ISLE

Perennial as the flowers that bloom in the Spring, tra-la, rumors of buried treasure startle the young and imaginative, and those who Micawber-like are always waiting "for something to turn up." All of them hope dimly some day to turn up with spade and pickax, the chest of doubloons, ingots and "pieces of eight" buried somewhere by that arch pirate and buccaneer, Captain William Kidd.

And now they are looking for the buried treasure in South Boston. George Kinnear and his sister of Campello have inside information, which came to them in a dream, they say, by which they hope to succeed where others failed. So they have gotten a special permit from the Boston Park Commission, and are making a systematic search of the northwest end of Castle Island. This is their fourth attempt. They have been digging three days this time. They are not discouraged, for the hunt for Captain Kidd's treasure has been going on for two centuries.

Beyond the fact that William Kidd was a bona bonnie lad, among the heather of old Scotland, little is known about his early life. Positively his first appearance was in 1689 in the West Indies, as captain of a privateer in the war with France. Two years later the General Assembly of New York voted him $750 for his services. Shortly after he received a commission to capture some of the pirates that were infesting the coast.

Temptation was too strong for him, however, and he became a pirate. For a decade, he was the terror of the seas. His most famous capture was a Bengalese cargo in the "Karry Merchant," which was said to contain 400,000 rupees.

But like all good things, Captain Kidd's career came to a close. He was finally arrested on State street in Boston. Shades of modern mining stocks! State street!

He was taken to England for trial, convicted of piracy and of murder, and sentenced to be hanged.

The story goes that Captain Kidd landed on an island one night with three fellow pirates and at the point of the pistol forced them to dig a hole for his treasure chests, afterward killing them so his secret would be safe, and sailing away, intended to come back and dig up his treasure.

For two centuries parties of treasure-seekers have explored almost every island from Labrador to the Carribbean, but the mystery is still unsolved.

He says: "If he will only return home, he will be forgiven, and if he would rather work than go to school, he can have his choice. Tell him, wherever he is located, to write a few lines to his mother, for she is broken-hearted over him. Tell him to be a good boy and return home." Young Griffith wore a dark gray striped suit, short knickerbocker pants, black shoes and stockings, a light gray cap, and a striped green and brown shirt. He is light complexioned and has blue eyes. Two front teeth are broken. He weighs eighty-five pounds.

Hires

America's healthiest, most refreshing and invigorating drink.

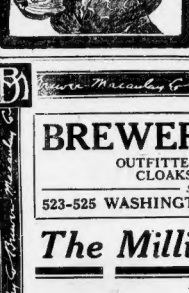
Also in bottles—carbonated.



THE DISCOVERY OF A NATIONAL DRINK

Hires Rootbeer the Result of Careful Scientific Inquiry.

Thousands upon thousands of chemists have experimented in past years to discover a drink which would combine pleasant flavor with health-giving properties. This presented a very difficult problem.

In some cases, chemists combined essential oils that produced delightful aroma and favor, but which afterwards caused irritation to the stomach, disarranged the system and even changed the blood corpuscles. Others have made drinks of alkalies and acids flavored by gums and synthetic flavors. These, while delightful to the taste, proved injurious to the health.

Again sedatives and narcotics were used which caused a soothing effect on nerve and brain. It was found that these made slaves of men.

Hires Rootbeer solved the problem. It was worked out after a careful study of the medicinal properties and chemical action of the different ingredients. It is made of Sarsaparilla, Juniper Berries, Hops, Spikenard, Teaberry Leaves, Ginger, Sassafras.

No matter how much Hires is taken into the system, it can have only beneficial results. Its properties are never antagonistic to nature.

It is perhaps longer and more favorably known by physicians than any other temperance drink.

MRS. BULL'S NOTES TO BROTHER READ IN COURT

Testifies He Remonstrated With Sister Over Gifts She Made to Hindu Professor.

Q.—And they dealt with the vedanta philosophy? A.—Yes.

One read by Mr. Thorp was dated August 12, 1907, written from Lyseon, Norway, birthplace of Ole Bull, by Mrs. Bull to Thorp. It began "Dear Joe," and said in part:

"If she has destroyed her later will, which Henry Vaughan signed, it might make the former one in his favor good. I should prefer in view of her and my deaths before yours that he (Henry) should not inherit from either of us."

Writes of Illness.

The next letter read by Thorp referred to the illness of Mrs. Bull's daughter, Olea. Mrs. Bull wrote to Thorp:

"I am especially thankful that Olea elects the doctors. It will be a safeguard during her convalescence. I send a copy of my letter to him (the doctor). I hope this month will see the danger past. Thank you for your cable. My heart stood still for a moment as all the letters had been sealed. I enclose a letter to Olea which you can deliver if she is well enough. Please read it yourself."

Mr. Whipple then questioned Thorp.

Q.—What illness does this letter refer to? A.—Olea had been taken seriously ill at Sir. Leggett's camp the previous year. She partially recovered and was brought to Cambridge in a special train.

Q.—How long was she at No. 168 Brattle street? A.—I should think a week or ten days. Then she went to West Lebanon.

Q.—Was her mother there? A.—Yes. Her mother went abroad soon after.

Q.—Did she grow worse after her mother went abroad? A.—Yes, she must have.

Q.—Was there anything in Mrs. Bull's letters that indicated any intention of coming home to see her sick daughter? A.—She went to England to meet Olea and got a cable that Olea was not coming. So she returned to Norway. But I think later letters show a plan to come home.

Gifts to the Swami.

Q.—Do you know to what extent she made gifts to the Swami? A.—No, I could only tell from examining her accounts. She never told me.

Q.—Did you know if she gave him $20,000? A.—No. I suppose that the gifts were small. From what I know of the disposition of her capital at that time I know the gifts must have been made from her income.

Q.—Did you ever remonstrate with your sister about her gifts to Swami Vivekananda? A.—No, but I did have some correspondence with her about her gifts to Dr. Rose.

A letter written by Mrs. Bull to her brother and read as the latter at this point indicates that Thorp had advised against his sister's making a contribution to the Greenacre conference. Other letters read regarding Olea's illness and their effect is summarized in the following questions and answers:

Q.—There is nothing in those letters that shows any great concern over Olea's illness, is there? A.—No.

Q.—Do they not show a real and intense interest in her friends and in the ordinary events of the day? A.—Yes, they do.

Names of some of the most prominent people of the country have come out in the will hearing in connection with this coterie of devotees of the Rajo Yoga, as the Hindoo belief is called.

Mrs. May Wright Sewall, one of the leading woman educators, writers and lecturers of the world, was a member of Mrs. Bull's mystic circle in Cambridge and was regarded by some of the members as possessing powers that were almost miraculous.

Woman Driven Insane.

Mrs. Sewall was more fortunate in her association with the strange worshippers at the Indian shrine than several others, as she is said to have escaped with no impairment of her mental or physical strength. She is now on a lecturing trip in the West.

Miss Sarah Jane Farmer, founder of the Green Acre Conference at Eliot, Me., was driven mad by her experiences and when in a maniacal frenzy, shrieking and crying, it was the custom of her Rajo Yoga associates to tie her and then resort to weird psychical ceremonies to free her from the devils of darkness that possessed her.

The late Professor James, the noted scientist of Harvard, who was interested in psychic research but who, so far as is known, did not take any particular stock in the Hindu teachings, was called to see Miss Farmer and gave it as his opinion that she was crazy. Miss Farmer is now in the Waverley Asylum.

Nicola Roberts, an Italian, who was brought back from Italy to testify about the almost unbelievable antics of the members of the Bull coterie, has been the principal witness so far to testify to the uncanny happenings in the famous studio home of mystery on Brattle street.

His story of much that happened there was told to the judge and jury in private. He gave it as his opinion that Mrs. Bull, by whom he was employed, was insane before she died.

Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughan is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Bull. Mrs. Vaughan was divorced from her husband, Henry G. Vaughan, of Cambridge, a few weeks ago, the action being taken in this State, the charge was desertion, alleged by Vaughan, with a cross libel making a similar charge, by Mrs. Vaughan.

Mrs. Vaughan has not been at the trial since it began as she is seriously ill at her home at West Lebanon, Me.

An interesting figure in the case is Mrs. Abbie E. Shapleigh, who lives at West Lebanon. Before she died Mrs. Bull became imbued with the belief that Mrs. Shapleigh had a mind fraught with psychic powers of evil and that she could send her deadly thoughts by means of telephone.

Mrs. Shapleigh had entered the Bull home as a nurse and had brought up Olea Bull almost as her own daughter. When Ole Bull died it was found that he had left Mrs. Shapleigh comfortably off. In her first will Mrs. Bull left Olea and Mrs. Shapleigh most of her property, but after she became associated with the Hindoos she added a codicil which directed expressly that nothing was to go to Mrs. Shapleigh.

It is expected that Mrs. Shapleigh will be one of the interesting witnesses in the trial. Her two daughters, Misses Amelia and Betty Shapleigh, were in attendance at the trial today, as were many other residents of West Lebanon.

In addition to making public the injurious effects of the "Raja Yoga" practices, testimony showed that six different wills were found among the private papers of Mrs. Ole Bull.

Sherman L. Whipple, senior counsel for the contesting daughter, Mrs. Vaughan of Cambridge, Mass., confessed he didn't know some of these were in existence until within an hour of their entry as exhibits. The majority were found during a recent search of the Cambridge home of the festivals known as the "studio house," by Attorney Ralph S. Bartlett, who is assisting Mr. Whipple.

It was shown that Mrs. Bull made wills annually, and that some years she made two or three wills with codicil attachments, and then filed or destroyed them.

Mrs. Bull's brother, Joseph Goodwin Thorp, who is one of the executors and who spent four days on the witness stand last week, was recalled by the contestant to throw light on these documents. He was sharply interrogated by Mr. Whipple concerning prior knowledge of his sister's plans to dispose of her property.

Mr. Thorp denied that Mrs. Bull had ever consulted him or asked his advice about making her wills, but admitted that they had discussed the subject in letters which they exchanged. A cedar chest, locked and sealed, which Mr. Thorp acknowledged he removed from the "studio house" to his home for inspection before special administrators were appointed, figured conspicuously.

Consultations on Wills.

First a draft of a will was offered, dated 1893, next a will dated 1901, others in 1902, 1905, 1906, 1909 and two in 1910 with codicils. There was evidence that a will and codicil had been drawn up April 3, 1910, but destroyed. The final one was dated January 14, 1910, with a codicil dated December 23. This is the instrument the legality or which is being attacked by Mrs. Bull's daughter.

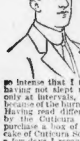
Mr. Whipple produced a series of letters which passed between Mrs. Bull and the witness, showing that her confidences concerning her wills extended back eleven years, which was prior to her adoption of the Raja Yoga faith.

PAMA KRISDINO

Founder of the ancient Hindu cult to which Mrs. Ole Bull became a convert and the rites of which she practiced at her home in Cambridge.

THOUGHT HE SHOULD GO MAD WITH ECZEMA

On Face and Scalp. Dry, Scaly, Itching and Burning. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and After a Few Days, Eczema Was Cured.



"I suffered from the early part of December until nearly the beginning of March with severe skin eruptions on my face and scalp. At first I treated it as a trivial matter. But after having used cuticle soap, medicated washes, cold cream, vanishing cream, etc., I found no relief whatever. After that, I diagnosed my case as eczema, because of its dry, scaly appearance. The itching and burning of my scalp became so intense that I thought I should go mad, having not slept regularly for months past only at intervals, waking my nose and then because of the burning and itching of my skin. Having read different testimonials of cures by the Cuticura Remedies, I decided to purchase a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. After using them for a few days I recognized a marked change in my condition. I bought about two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and five cakes of Cuticura Soap in all, and after a few days I was entirely free from the itching and burning. My eczema was entirely cured, all due to using Cuticura Soap and Ointment daily. Hereafter I will never be without a cake of Cuticura Soap on my washstand. I hope you will publish my letter so that others may learn of Cuticura Remedies and be cured." (Signed) David M. Shaw, c/o Paymaster, Pier 35, N. R., New York City, June 2, 1910.

SHIELDS CASE GOES TO JURY

PLYMOUTH, N. H., May 26.—The fate of Walter W. Shields, a Philadelphia sportsman accused of manslaughter because Cuttelle Kenney, a lumberman, was shot to death in the former's room in the Hotel Mooselauke in Warren on the night of February 5, now rests in the hands of the jury. They went out at 11:45 a. m. to-day. The defence rested yesterday afternoon, and this morning Attorney Nathaniel Martin of Concord pounded with the jury to acquit Shields, claiming that he had acted in self-defence in the fight with Kenney in the hotel and that Kenney before that had threatened to take the accused man's life. Attorney General Eastman, who conducted the prosecution, asked for conviction.

Judge Pike delivered his charge and silently the jury left a court room in which was packed to the door. If Shields was found guilty he might be sentenced from one to twenty years' imprisonment.

The climax of pub... interest in this case came when Shields took the stand in his own behalf and told of the fight in his hotel room. He told how he, Kenney and another man had had a quart of whiskey before his guests left the room and that while he was preparing for bed Kenney came back into the room without knocking and demanded another drink.

He said that Kenney became abusive and violent when more whiskey was refused, and how in a struggle for possession of the key to the door of the room the lumberman struck him on the head several times. There was a struggle, Shields said, in which they rolled over his trunk, which had the lid up. A revolver lay at the top of the trunk and Kenney seized it. Then Shields felt he was fighting for his life and in the struggle the revolver was discharged while in the lumberman's hands and he was fatally wounded. In his fight with Kenney, Shields claimed he acted only in self-defence.

TIGERS-GIANTS SERIES STARTS TO-DAY WITH BROOKLYN DODGERS

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

GREAT COLLEGE MEET ATTRACTS BIG CROWD

An early crowd turned out for the great intercollegiate games at the Stadium this afternoon. The weather was cold and raw, but heavy overcoats and blankets did the work. Many beautifully gowned women were among the gathering and they were as enthusiastic as the men. The meet was scheduled to start at 2:30, but the excitement started long before that time. All of the athletes were out early for tryouts and the rooters were also on hand.

With a total of 956 entries from all of the colleges of the East and one college of the Middle West, the meet is a record breaker in this respect. The recent performance of the athletes who will compete to-day have been of such character that there is every reason to believe that the meet this year will be exceptional for the number of records which will be broken.

The rain yesterday afternoon and evening has softened the track up just enough, so that with one this morning, it will be in the fastest possible condition. This is what the Harvard authorities are after because and prayers to this effect ascended all night from the sections of these six theories and they will continue to do so this evening during the last conditions to-morrow for the finals of the great struggle.

Flower of American Athletics.

Quiet old Boston is alive with the hundreds of the flower of American athletes. Yesterday afternoon and last night they had a good rest for the hard times they will have to-day, for the caliber of the meet is such this year, that in order for any one to reach the final heats in their respective events, they will have to show that they are above the average in the trials this afternoon.

Harvard leads the colleges in number of entries with a total of 126, while Cornell follows in close second with 120. The entries from the other colleges are: Yale, University of Pennsylvania, seventy-nine; Michigan, sixty-eight; Princeton, sixty-two; Dartmouth, sixty-one. Every one of the twenty-four colleges in the association will have men running in the meet to-day to the extent at least of three contestants, for the rule of the association is that if any contestants fails to run at least three men in the meet one year, its membership terminates. Three lone gentlemen from the Pennsylvania State College have journeyed to Boston to run a part in the meet although they haven't the slightest idea of getting beyond the trial heats in their events this afternoon.

Games on Time.

The year at least the games are going to be run off on time, and officials of the big meet have been instructed to start each event on the minute appointed for it, and no contestants will be waited for.

One heat is to be tried this year for the first time. That is, the running of the half mile run will be started from a quarter mile where the runners will have a straight 220-yard straightaway, and the event will finish after a full turn has been made around the log at the finish of the quarter mile. This arrangement was worked out to prevent the fighting for the pole at the first turn, and the consequent scrapping which has engendered all along the track. In addition to obtaining this benefit, it was also expected that the 220-yard straightaway dash at the start will make it possible for faster time to be made.

With everything arranged in such an ideal manner for this meet, it would not be at all surprising were the record set by Parsons of Yale, or 1.56, be broken by the group of fleet footed men who will compete. Parsons of Cornell already has time for 2.5 second behind that of Parsons to his credit this year, and with such favorable conditions many look to him to lower the intercollegiate mark. And to win a race he will have to step some, for he will have such fast men against him as Treble of Harvard, Jacques of Harvard, Hall of Michigan, Bodley of Pennsylvania and possibly all of the Quaker team, also Chaplin of Princeton.

The events which should provide the greatest amount of interest to the spectators are the quarter and half mile runs. Both of these events will have unusually fast men struggling for places and the fight will be fierce. Three men from each heat in these runs will qualify for the finals to-morrow. While just how many will qualify in the other events is a question which can only be decided when the competitions relieve us. The 4 and will can be figured out.

First place looms for the biggest college track meet of the year, still seem to be in doubt for the strength of Harvard and Pennsylvania. Who are but favorites, cannot yet be determined, relatively speaking.

Cornell is being chosen for the first place because the lithe men this year have a very strong team of first place men with one or two men of second and third rank capable of thirds. It will be remembered last fall any meeting Pennsylvania won the meet on six first places and one second. This year the Quakers have a team of 13 all though it does not have in its ranks such a large number of first place winners, is better balanced from that the winning aggregation of last fall.

Honors In Doubt.

Yale looks to something like a second place, or at least not worse than a third place to the big meet, because of her strength in the field events and in the hurdles. Chisholm is expected to take away both of the timber topping events, while Gardner, Wagoner and Beverly seem to be pretty nearly a thing by themselves in the pole vault. Captain Kilpatrick should take second in the shot and is out after a place in the javelin, although he does not look class enough for this, while Yale expects to gather in some points in the high jump who is tangled.

Michigan is decidedly a dark horse. Incidentally it might not be amiss to state that this year is certainly a great opportunity for some such aggregation as Michigan to step into the breach and spoil the aspirations of some of the colleges that have been selected as sure winners. The reason is that in many of the events the two favorites will be engaged in a little throat-cutting affair which, rather than helping them are in taking points, will, of course, injure them greatly. If they are doing this it might be possible for the Wolverine to step in and quietly walk off with enough points to capture the championship.

Michigan Stars.

Michigan seems to be practically certain of three first places, with Craig in the dashes and Horner in the shot put, the record in which event is seemed destined to break. Should Michigan prove equal to the occasion and add a few spring enough unknowns into the ring to pick up a few points, the West might go home with the laurels for the first time in the history of the association.

Harvard is looking for very little in this meet. Table it is hoped, will take the hammer throw but he will have to do all his mettle and do his best, for he will be closely pursued by Tiller and Anderson of Dartmouth. Jacques and Lawless should prove to the mile, while Whitington, the holder of the college record, looks good for at least a second in the mile. Keller of Harvard is selected to win the quarter from the field, notwithstanding that McArthur of Cornell has run 49 2-5 seconds, and Lester of Williams has done one-fifth of a second slower. These are about the only men that there is certain will take points, but if they do their best they should pile up quite a respectable total.

Princeton and Dartmouth and Williams do not figure as possibilities at all this year. The only place they will count at all will be in cutting in on the big teams, and possibly spoiling some of the favorites' chances of taking the meet.

Cheer up! There are more Baseball Guides.

On account of the great demand for the 1909 page Illustrated Baseball Guides given away by the Sunday AMERICAN last Sunday, another installment of the Guides has been issued and will be given FREE for the coupons cut out of SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN.

CHICAGO, May 26.—Russell Blackburn shortstop of the Chicago Americans, who has been out of the game practically the entire season, had a floating cartilage removed from his knee yesterday. Blackburn will not be able to join the team again for at least two months, if at all. The operation may result in a slight stiff ness in the injured knee.

Blackstone Cigar Quality is Higher than its Price

Ten cents doesn't seem much to pay for a cigar that is superior in flavor and quality to many higher priced brands. To 1/2 BOND BLACKSTONE smokers the wonder this year is how they can be sold for 10c. It's largely because we are willing to pay the price for the choicest leaf from a short crop, making less profit, and making up the difference in cost when fine tobacco is in abundance.

FIGHTER GOES WEST TO STUDY WOLGAST

By ED W. SMITH.

Owen Moran, one of the greatest lightweight fighters ever turned out of Great Britain is in Frisco. With him are his wife and his manager, Charley Harvey of New York. They traveled over the same route he will take in order that Mrs. Moran could see some of the scenery along that route.

The fighter and his manager were eager to get to San Francisco in time to see the battle there Saturday afternoon between Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion, and Frankie Burns, the crack Pacific coast scrapper of the class. Moran is in Ad Wolgast on July 4 for Jim Coffroth in the latter's arena, and every little thing that may be relevant to the big crowd on Saturday will help the national holiday bonus fund considerably.

While in Chicago Harvey made a few flying dashes around the town, but, as there was less than four hours between trains he had little chance to mingle much. However, he had plenty of opportunity to say over and over again that he thought Moran had an excellent chance of annexing the big title from Wolgast.

Moran in Grand Form.

"Owen means business, I am sure of that, for his wife has a lot of influence with him, and in keeping him right down to the chalk line. He took the pledge five weeks ago; never had heard of such a thing before.

"And, by the way, let me remind you that this Moran-Wolgast contest suits the way I put the names, don't you? Is the first real international contest for the lightweight championship since the days they have fought that Jem Driscoll came over here and fought Jack McAuliffe for it.

"And it's to be the first international contest for any title since Pedlar Palmer and Terry McGovern fought for the bantamweight title. So, there were precedents to us.

Comes From Hotbed of Pugs.

"Moran comes, you know from the hotbed of all good British fighting material, Birmingham. He's a real Brum all right; found a real fighter, of that there's no question.

"We're not exactly nervous about Wolgast fighting Frankie Burns next Saturday afternoon, but, of course, something is liable to happen. Burns is a long, long way from being a sucker, and Birtie Adair will have his work cut out for himself. Burns can smother up and go into a shell better than anybody I ever saw, and can come out of it like a flash. Wolgast will have a lot of trouble with him.

"I'd like to see him knock Burns asleep on account of our house, because if he doesn't beat Burns decisively and in good style our receipts will suffer.

AUTO RACERS IN GREAT MEET

MOTOR SPEEDWAY, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 30.—Forty-six entrants for the 500-mile automobile races which will be run here Memorial Day, today started to the qualifying rounds in an effort to make the grade for competition in the 200-mile race.

The first to try with their drivers at the wheel, one up to the starting line and one by one flashed away in a cloud of dust. Barring accidents, all the starters will qualify for the 500 event which is of a total purse of nearly $100,000.

Thousands of spectators saw the start of the sprints today and although the rides were more fast than they will be for the big race, interest was keen. It is possible Louis Chevrolet will be one of the favorites Decoration Day.

The postponement of the Grand Prix race in France, which threatened to keep him out of it, has given him an opportunity of taking a chance for the money and he is circulating a petition among other drivers to be allowed to enter.

WILLOUGHBY HERE TO MEET ANDERSON

Walter Willoughby, the crack Cleveland boxer, who meets Sam Anderson, of Somerville at the Lexington Tuesday night for the middleweight championship, arrived in Boston today, looking the picture of good health and strength. He says he never felt better in his life and if Anderson beats him he will have to express to offer to do it, for he does not believe he ever did a better job of training for a fight than he has done for this one. Anderson is also supremely confident of his ability to repeat the win he scored over Willoughby two years ago, and the two boys had both Tex Rickard and Jack Welsh, who is to referee the bout, over to their training quarters today to look them over. Both men are admirably type of the better class of wrestling, fast, clever and heady workers, and those who are fortunate enough to see tonight's battle should get the benefit of a treat of their own.

NO PROTESTS RECEIVED.

The board of governors of the Eastern A. A. A. met at the Hotel Touraine last night to settle any questions that might be in abeyance regarding the intercity games championship to-day and to transact such other business as might come before the meeting.

The board, contrary to custom, did not have a protest to decide, and the most important business transacted was the drawings.

BROWN KNOCKS OUT MURPHY

NEW YORK, May 30.—Knockout Brown could not be better named. The blonde-haired Dutchman from the East Side put [illegible] to bed, knocked out [illegible] in the second round of their scheduled ten-round bout at the Madison A. C. and the Pride of Yorkville was declared the winner by the referee when Murphy failed to come out for the third round.

Brown was the favorite in the betting. The Irish was set first and exciting that the majority of the spectators wondered what all Murphy's fame was for. Brown, however, was in no way impressive in such a manner as to cause Murphy's backers to [illegible] a great deal of confidence. Murphy was a well set-up fighter, a trifle heavier than Brown, but he was a bad mixer and seemed to [illegible] and drop to the canvas from a blow aimed by his opponent grazing his face. It was all over.

Before Brown counted ten over the prostrate fighter, but the fall fell on deaf ears. Murphy was in a [illegible] of the flat of his back, with agony depicted on his countenance. He seems to have been carried to his corner the Brown admirers were jumping into the ring with glee pleasure. It took three officers and all the club officials to clear the stage.

Murphy was down twice. Twenty seconds after the boys shook hands Brown rushed Murphy over to the latter's corner and with a well directed left scattered Tommy in the stomach. The awful kick he [illegible] this point forced Murphy to drop his guard for an instant. It was a terrible error. Brown's right [illegible] Murphy flashed through the air. It landed squarely on Murphy's jaw, and the fighter from Pitch staggered and his knees sagged. With the agility of a panther the Dutch sensation leaped at his fallen opponent and crashed another left to the same spot. It was all over. The referee endeavored to count and Murphy dropped and rolled over.

Murphy received the longer share of the purse, but Brown is not worrying a bit, for his whole object was expressed in the words he used to Murphy as the latter began to pass out to the [illegible] room through a lane of cops.

"Well, Morgan, didn't I tell you what I would do to that fellow Murphy?"

THE VALUE OF GOOD CLOTHES

No man will deny the value of good clothes—of being appropriately dressed. But sometimes a question arises as to what are good clothes and what are not?

Good clothes are clothes made from good woolens—cut right—with snap and style to them. This style and snap is soon lost if the clothes are poorly made; a little matter that is carefully guarded against in our workrooms.

Our prices for a suit (or top coat) range $15 to $35, but no matter what the price, you get good clothes and nothing else when we make them.

When the Old Friends Stood in His Way

The Successful Young Man Felt That He Could Not Bother With Them, Now That He Was Rising

By KENNETH HARRIS

THE young man who was particularly well dressed, and a certain hotness to his brow and brim in his manner, fumbled in his pocket as he felt the touch on his arm before looking up from the type-written letters that he was reading.

"I don't want your ticket," said the pleasant faced young fellow who had just entered the car, "keep it for the conductor, Willie."

Willie's rather hard bitten face relaxed to a smile that was a most cordial "Good old Jim!" he exclaimed. "Aren't you hot? Sit down, won't you?"

"Since you are so pressing I believe I will, said the pleasant faced young man, soberly. "I generally find it more comfortable than standing up, anyway. How's the boy? You're looking like a certificate of deposit, Willie."

I can't kick," replied the business like young man "I haven't done so rotten bad in the last two years. I'm assistant to the comptroller now and I'll be buying in six months. Glad to see you Jim."

The pleasant faced young man removed his hat. "Excuse me for keeping you," he said, humbly. Then, addressing the Finisch lamps, "And he still calls me 'Jim'. Did you mean for me to sit down beside you, sir?"

"Don't be a chump," said the business like young man. "What's the good word with you?"

"Plugging," said the other "Just plugging along. But I expect they're going to make me a justice of the Supreme Court in about sixty years. I don't suppose you ever see any of the people that used to be at the old joint?"

How the Old Friends Fare

Willie looked a little confused. "I'm still there," he said. "I'm a typewriter," he went on, in explanation "I don't see any need of spending more than I have to because I'm human, you know. And I call it. Of course it pays a man to dress well That's business, I suppose, but I'm an old roan."

The pleasant faced young man considered this information. "I guess, too, that you hate to leave old friends," he smiled. "Well, I'm glad your head isn't swelled. Give my love to Mother Jones and tell her that I said so."

"Friends, my foot!" the businesslike young man snarled. "I haven't got a friend in the house. I'm not keen about having 'em, either."

He seemed to feel, I suppose?" hazarded the pleasant faced young man.

No. They're most of them there. Old man Tooley, Dave Price, Mitchie, Mrs. Hudson and Mrs. Spencer and the fair Julia Mosby is still waiting on table."

Miss Ruth gone away?"

The businesslike young man looked embarrassed for the second time. "She's still there," he answered shortly.

"You and Dave were always quite chummy," suggested the pleasant-faced young man.

"I know," said the other. "The trouble with Dave is that he's always hard up. Wants to borrow money, and I'm no State loan institution. I told him so once and he's had a grouch against me ever since."

"Of course," he went on as his companion was silent, "of course I used to borrow of Dave, once in a while, in the old days, but then it was mutual He'd come to me, one week, and I'd go to him another week. Now it's all one way. I've got money and he hasn't. I earned my money and saved it, too. But when a fellow gets a little ahead everybody's after him with their hands out. Mrs. Spencer got sore because I got tired of giving up for her church doings."

How Success Changes a Man

"I see," remarked the pleasant-faced young man, thoughtfully. "I always did think that they were a jolly, kind sort of a lot, but I guess I was mistaken But I'll bet Mother Jones hasn't changed."

"She wanted to raise the price of board on me, but I wouldn't stand for it," said the businesslike young man. "It isn't my fault if the cost of living is higher than it used to be, I suppose her profits less, that's all. It's likely to be the same in any business.

"I told her she could have my room if she wanted it, but I guess she didn't want it very bad. She knew I'd got a little raise or two and she thought she'd come it on me. Molly, too, she seems to think I ought to come across with a tip about every so often. The fact of the matter is that as soon as a man begins to be a little successful people get envious, and if they can't work you they're down on you."

"Miss Ruth down on you?"

"No, she's not down on me, but—well, we're not the same as we used to be. She got some notions in her head that—— And I think that a girl who had worked in an office for five years would have some idea of what was business and what wasn't, wouldn't you? She hasn't.

"As I was saying, a fellow when he's getting on, has got to get along by him self. Why, I'll say to the department would every one of them be glad if I was fired to-morrow. Old Ballard hates me, because I've a mind I'm going to get his job And I am, too. He's a back number."

"Well, here's my station, Willie," said the pleasant faced young man rising. "But I thought old Ballard did you a good turn when he took you on."

"Did himself a good turn."

"Goodby," said the pleasant-faced young man. I needn't tell you to take care of yourself I know you will, and I'm glad you've been so successful. So long"

Drillin' the Band

DOC CUMMINS is havin' a whale of a time;
He's a drillin' the band.
They've got their new uniforms. Say,
Ain't they look prime!
An' they've built them a stand.
There's a piccolo in it, two horns an' a drum
An' a cornet, I reckon that's goin' it some;
But Doc Cummins he claims that they're all on the bum.
He's mighty pernickety, Doc is.

Doc Cummins he'll cuss an' get red in the face
When he's leadin' the band.
An' he says Harry Parker is clear off his base;
I think Harry's done grand.
There is ragin' emotions aroused in Doc's breast
When George Warfield keeps playin' right on through the rest;
But the boys ain't to blame; they're doin their best
Does a sort of a crawl.

Doc Cummins stands up there x-shakin, his stick
At the boys in the band.
But he don't play a note and he don't do a lick—
Only wavin' his hand.
You would think that he done the bull business, b'gee!
When he yells at Frank Hopkins he's plumb off the key.
"Holy cat! Play together you lunkheads," says he.
Don't seem to have 'em all quit, first thing.

His Aunt's Heir

"ESTHER," he said, "I want to read you a chapter in this book of finance. Gives you a very good idea of the art of money-making and handling it is immensely interesting."

I was lying down on the sofa when he came in, and I got up and took my seat.

"Don't work. Sit with your hands folded and listen I want to feel that I have your undivided attention."

I think I must have slept a little while he read. He didn't notice it, though When he had finished his chapter it had cleared up finely outside, and he asked me to take a walk. He didn't want me to go with him. He said he was going to meet Sinclair and bring him back to dinner.

I didn't say a word to my husband and he didn't refer to last night, and he didn't look to see if I had been out, ever again. I put down in my trunk, the one I had packed so hastily when I came from Bracketsville on my wedding day.

That night, as we were sitting in the library, Mr. Sinclair asked: "What do you hear from your drama, Kirk?"

And my husband answered: "It had a short and happy history, my dear chap—early taken home!"

Mr. Sinclair laughed and said: "You mean, then, it has been accepted?"

"I mean that God loved it too well, it died young."

His understood, and changed the conversation. They began to talk about the finance book.

Left Fifty Thousand

Nobody had acknowledged our marriage in Mr. Kirkland's family. His uncle died in Washington, and against us from the first. But now, when Mr Kirkland's money was getting low, he went to San Francisco died and left him fifty thousand dollars.

He was perfectly delighted

He put away all his author's paper and his soft black pencils, and I cleaned up the table and brushed out the burned marks as well as I could from the grate cloth. He went into the office on important banker, a friend of Mr. Sinclair's and his husband, and he loved intriguing in a quixotic scheme putting through

Jesse Pomeroy's Letters to His Mother.

Nothing like, these remarkable human documents from the solitary cell of a life prisoner have ever before been printed The second instalment will be found in next

Sunday's American.

From then on Mr. Kirkland thought of nothing but money. I don't know how it was or what kind of chance of mine came over him, but the same imagination he had put into his drama he put into the work which he did with Ellis & Ellis Anyway, he was wonderful. It wasn't my vanity or my pride in him that makes me say this. Mr. Ellis, who afterward made a big fortune with Mr ——— and Mr. came up one night to see Mr Kirkland at Washington square.

"Do you know what a brainy man you have married, Mrs. Kirkland?" Mr. Ellis asked me.

And I told him that I thought my husband could do pretty much anything he set him mind upon.

By the week they gave him and the responsibilities and the way they kept him down at night, working till morning, and by the telegrams and the meetings on Sunday, and by my husband's own letters which I wrote out for him, I knew he was valuable

Mr. Sinclair saw a great deal of my husband, and all Mr. Kirkland's spare time, which wasn't much, he spent with his friend talking about the "Science of Finance" and the "Beauty of Accurate Computation." When my husband's business was over and he had a free minute he would sit down at his desk and make figures.

I have put away page after page of these figures—big sheets of foolscap covered with his close, small, black figures. I couldn't imagine what they were about, and I never asked. He would turn them on table-tops, on pages of books, and he would sit and smile over them as if they were something beautiful

He put the same absorption into them that he did into everything else. And if they could have been translated I guess they would have read like a poem. But the poetry books were all dusty, and he never read aloud to me any more. I missed it, and once I asked him what the difference was, and he said:

"My dear Esther, don't fancy that you can find any real music in fiction! There is none aesthetic charm in a problem of Euclid than in all of Shakespeare."

I wrote that down.

Mr. Sinclair was always very nice to me. I never really saw a kinder man. You couldn't tell him a hard-luck story but he would turn out everything he had in his pockets. Once in a Winter's storm he gave the overcoat off his back right there in Washington Square to a tramp He caught a fearful cold and was laid up in Brooklyn. My husband went over to see him there

Just the same, from the first I did not like his influence over my husband I couldn't put my finger on a single reason for this. He was gentle and patient and fond of Mr. Kirkland, but there was something I didn't like. Once I thought I might be jealous because I saw so little of my husband, but that wasn't the real reason, for he was never content unless I was in the corner sewing while he and Sinclair talked.

By one thing I knew that Sinclair was sincere in his friendship for me.

A Broken Engagement

Fanny broke off her engagement. Mr. De Groot turned out to be a regular flirt, and my husband said that there wasn't a real drop of blood in the fellow's body, and Fanny was well out of it; but he wouldn't let her stay in Bracketsville alone, feeling as upset, so we invited her to spend a month with us

She was prettier than ever, and my husband enjoyed having her there, and laughed and joked with her a great deal. Our sitting-room was small, and, when Sinclair and Fanny and all of us sat there with the tobacco smoke, it seemed so full that I took to sitting in the bedroom, and sometimes I was in bed and asleep when Mr Sinclair went home and Fanny in her room.

Kirkland called her "Sunshine" and "Lollipops" and "Chits," and lots of names, but now she only laughed, when they used to make her mad. One day when Fanny had gone to work my husband said:

"I want you both to come down and see my offices. Esther, stop for your six after lunch, then come over to Nassau street and see how I toil over the barbarous accounts"

I was very much pleased It was the first time he had suggested my going down town. I thought perhaps we would meet Mr Ellis, and I put on my best dress and new gloves. I met Fanny at 2 o'clock and went in and asked for my husband He had an office all to himself, and he was there with his own stenographer. He shook hands with Fanny and said to her:

"So you fetched the primroses to Nassau street, did you, Sweetness? I thought the spring had come."

She did look springlike, for she had a new hat with primroses, and a new coat and she was so, so pretty.

He didn't speak to me once. He showed us all over the building, and laughed and talked with Fanny, and Mr. Ellis had me come into his room, too, and when it was time to go my husband got his hat and coat and started up-town with us—that is, with Fanny.

He didn't appear to notice that I had come. I waited behind and let them walk on together, and at the corner of Broadway Mr. Sinclair came out of the drug store and saw us and walked along a little ways with me. Then we took the car home. Before he left me at the door Sinclair said to me:

"I wonder if you are as perfect as you seem, Mrs Kirkland."

I answered that I was just what I seemed, anyway, but it wasn't perfect; and I felt sure he began to talk this way because he had something he wanted to tell me. I stood still in the street and looked at him.

With the Boys

"I am taking it for granted, then, that you are perfect, and, in this case, I can speak frankly. Don't keep that pretty sister of yours here with you. None of us should play with dangerous emotions, and all of the feelings that a girl of Miss Carey's age has are dangerous—"

He looked very serious.

"—It isn't fair to—it isn't fair to her. You are not angry with me, are you?"

And I told him not at all.

When my husband and Fanny came in he never asked me where I had disappeared to, or appeared to have remarked my absence. He was very gay. That night he took Fanny to the theatre. It was hard to know just what to do and how to do it Of course, I wouldn't for the world have spoken to Mr. Sinclair about it. We never referred to it again. I thought of three or four ways.

No Wonder

"ABSENT-MINDEDNESS is a dreadful drawback to success," said Mayor Whitlock at a banquet in Toledo.

"I know a very absent-minded lawyer. The other day it was raining and blowing and he engaged a taxicab. On the way to court he overtook the judge, plodding along on foot through rain and wind and mud, and he halted the taxicab and invited his honor to ride with him.

"The judge accepted this invitation, the taxicab duly he led at the court house and the absent-minded lawyer hopped out and ran upstairs to get ready the papers for a petition he was to present.

"But when court opened and the petition was presented, the judge, who had been so courteous in the cab a few minutes before, now repulsed the lawyer coldly and contemptuously.

"As the poor fellow stood stupefied, a crier whispered to him:

"Don't you know what you did? You ran in and left his honor to pay for the taxicab."

Sorrow the Great Teacher That Softens the Human Heart

It Is the Man Who Has Been Poor and Hungry Himself Who Pities the Fallen

By DOROTHY DIX

CORRESPONDENT asks me this question:

"Does joy soften more hearts than sorrow, as the French proverb says? Which is the greater educator, laughter or tears?"

To my humble opinion, trouble is the great teacher to whom we are compelled to go to school if we ever acquire sufficient wisdom even to begin to comprehend the great problem of life. It is only from having suffered ourselves that we learn to pity and forgive, and, without this knowledge all other knowledge is the folly of fools.

Joy teaches us nothing but arrogance and egotism. Those who have never been anything but healthy and prosperous all their lives have no patience with those who are not as well off as themselves.

That is what makes the judgments of the young so hard and cruel. They have had no experience of sorrow to teach them that our misfortunes are not always of our own making, and how often we can do our best and yet fail. They are untried soldiers, who have never smelt the smoke of battle, yet who cry out "Coward" upon all who come limping in, bloody and wounded, from the fight, instead of rolling in on a flower-bedecked chariot of victory.

The Old Who Have Suffered

It is old people, those whose eyes have been washed clear by tears, those who have stumbled and fallen and picked themselves up again and again, who know from experience how, in the country, the brave yet heart often falters and the strongest hand grows weary, who have no word of reproach for the vanquished.

We have a phrase for this. We say of a man or woman that he or she is "mellowed by age," and by this we simply mean that sorrow has taught her or him what joy never could.

The man who inherited a fortune, or who was born with the money-making instinct, seldom has any patience with the poor man. He does not get along. Any man who isn't an idiot or lazy, he thinks, can make money. As for not being able to get a job he scoffs at the idea, and as for when a poor deprecating wretch of a beggar comes around he turns away from him with withering contempt.

It is the man who has known the pinch of poverty himself, who has been hungry and cold, and has felt the awful sickening disappointment with which he turned away from a door where even work was denied him, who has his whole soul melt with pity at the sight of every mendicant or every derelict of life on a park bench.

The Great Charity of the Poor

Of course, it will be said that the rich are often very generous, and that when a man makes a few millions he builds libraries and churches and schools and hospitals. That is true; but all the benefactions of the rich, the great monuments they build to their charity and blazon with their names, sink into absolute nothingness, even when measured by the dollar standard, with the unrecorded charity that the poor extend out of their poverty to each other.

It is the poor man and woman who have seen their own children pale with pain who divide their last loaf of bread with their neighbors' hungry brood. It is the family that has been evicted itself because it could not pay its rent that takes in the people next door whose poor sticks of furniture have been thrown out on the sidewalk.

The gifts of Rockefeller and Carnegie combined are doubled and trebled and quadrupled by the aggregate of the charity of the poor to each other every year.

It is only those who have suffered who understand the sacredness of sorrow. When you hear a man or woman talk of the folly of some mother who is grieving over a dead baby, you may know there is no vacant little chair in his or her household. None talk of the morbidness of sorrow except those who have never loved and lost.

Their Hour in Gethsemane

Let the little white hearse stand once in front of the door of a man and woman; let them lay a waxen figure with its tiny hands folded over its little breast in a coffin, and you never hear them rail again at the folly of unavailing grief Their hour in Gethsemane has taught them more than all the years of happy security, in which they derided other people's sorrow as weakness because they had never felt any themselves.

It is strange and sad but true that we never learn anything except from our own experience, and that we can only understand what others must endure through having borne the same things ourselves.

This is why the soul is born in the travail of sorrow, and why our tears make the rain that must water all the beautiful and tender flowers that spring up about life. Unbroken prosperity makes an arid desert of the heart in which they parch and die.

Scientific Bust Developer

Science has at last discovered a treatment for a condition which has always been regarded as a calamity—the lack of a beautiful bust and figure. Every woman has the natural right to a beautiful form. Now that there is one who never get proper development and seem doomed to stay flat-chested and unattractive.

Dr. Campbell's treatment for lack of development is for sale by Houghton & Dutton Co. and in every case where it has been tried has proven its wonderful power to increase the bust measurements. That I could write a guarantee of success or money refunded does not mean anything, but when businessmen, no matter what it is, investigate—and a simple, scientific treatment for a development course for $1.00 on a guarantee—and then Houghton & Dutton Co., or by mail—prepaid from the Lambert Chem. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

How to Treat the Skin

Many skin diseases like eczema are due to an external cause and are not the result of impure blood. The taking of internal medicines is a waste of time and money, as many sufferers can testify. The simplest and safest remedy is Cadum, the new medical compound. It stops the itching at once, and the healing begins immediately. People who have suffered for years and who have tried everything should take fresh courage, for this new compound is different from anything else. It is for sores, psoriasis, ulcers, ringworm, rash, pimples, scaly skin, scabs, eruptions, blotches, itch, etc. 10c and 25c per box.

Desperate Desmond

THE WILD MONKEYS WILL KILL CLAUDE AND HIS SWEET HEART, SO SHE REFUSED TO MARRY ME EH? HA HA
HORRORS! WE ARE LOST DESMOND, IT'S THE VILLAIN DESMOND'S WORK, BUT I HAVE A DESPERATE PLAN WHICH WILL FOIL HIS FIENDISH PLOT
CLAUDE YOU ARE A HERO AND I LOVE ONLY YOU.
IT'S RUIN, RUIN, RUIN TO RUN INTO THE RIVER BELOW THAT BOAT WILL CAPSIZE US!
GREAT HARVEY! MONKEYS HAVE SPOILED MY PLANS BUT NOW I'LL BE MAN SWIPING PIG IN MID-AIR
NO CUP FOR ME
NOW DIE OR THOSE HORNS YOU BUNK-HERD - YOUR ROSAMOND IS MINE BY MY POWER AGAIN HAHA
BEFORE THAT BOAT CREW RESCUES THEM I'LL CARRY THE LOVERS AWAY IN MY TRUSTY AIR SHIP HAHA

With the aid of their faithful motor-cycle, Claude and Rosamond might possibly have been able to escape from Desperate Desmond and his savage pals, if only those monkeys and gorillas hadn't gone and butted into the game. But the beasts are hanging on like grim death, and it is impossible for our hero to shake them.

Desmond and Gomgots are having the time of their lives up there in the nero-plane, clearing away our brave hero and our beauteous heroine. They confidently expect to see both the lovers torn to pieces by the infuriated animals. It's great fun to see a good scrap when you are in no danger of getting mixed up in it.

Claude and Rosamond are now crossing the cañyon of the Oogli-Googli river on a narrow log. The monkeys and gorillas are making the trip, too, though they have not been invited. Far down below a boat sailing by with a view to a hero decides to jump the bike into the stream in the hope of being rescued.

But the monkeys put the kibosh on that stunt by scrapping their tails over docs. While the motorcycle and the monkeys and bikes between heaven and earth, and Claude and Rosamond are up against it—harder than ever, for now the villain has a chance to swoop down from the clouds and capture them.

And that is precisely what the cowardly cur does. While he grabs them away from the monkeys and takes them into the aeroplane, where they are at the mercy of him and his old side partners, Chief Gomgots. Now to carry them away to some secluded spot where he can torture them at his leisure. What do you suppose he'll do to them?

Never mind guessing. We'll tell you. The villain is throwing our hero out of the machine directly over a herd of rhinoceroses, each one of whom has a sharp horn on the end of its nose. If all goes as Desmond hopes, Claude will be impaled on one of those horns. For two-they details see to-morrow's pictures.

The Manicure Lady

She Thinks Gaby des Lys Has an Awful Nerve to Come Over to This Side

"I SEEN something in the papers that a dancer that had ensnared a king was coming over to this country to ensnare a lot of theatregoers," said the Manicure Lady.

"What was that you seen?" mocked the Head Barber.

"Ain't you seen it yourself?" asked the Manicure Lady.

"I didnt see nothing in the papers this morning," said the Head Barber, "except that safety razor stock is soaring and that Mexico is hounded by the United States on the north."

"Cut out the politics," said the Manicure Lady. "I was starting to tell you about this dancer, Gabby de Lies, or whatever her name is. I wonder, George, if she has really got nerve enough to come over her and caper on the stage just because a cheap king fell for her."

Manicure Lady Has a Plan

"I ain't interested one way or the other," said the Head Barber.

"If she gets this far, George, and gets away with a stage success, I am going right over to Washington and flirt with some ambassador. Maybe I can get him to wink at me and then I can get a few weeks at a thousand a week.

"Goodness knows, George, it will be a welcome relief from my present position. Last week I managed to grab $7 over and above the cost of my new orange sticks and soap, and on top of that I had to listen to the whispers of a lot of fresh Joes from here, there and everywhere. The game ain't worth the candle George, and I'm getting tired of it.

"Just this morning, for instance, I was doing the nails of an old gink that could have been my father if I had stood for it. I have some beautiful pictures at home," he says to me.

"'I wish you and your sister would come up to the house some night,' he says. 'That is very sweet of you,' I replies, 'but my sister is blind and I have seen everything.' This is a tough world, George, as near as I can make it out, for everything except them fast dancers."

"What does Wilfred say about it?" asked the Head Barber.

Brother Wilfred Has a Poem on It

"He thinks it is a shame," said the Manicure Lady, "for a dancing girl that never done nothing better than to capture a king to come over here and get a thousand or more a week, when so many dancing girls is trying hard to capture eighteen dollars per in some legitimate line. He is thinking of writing a poem for one of them weekly magazines which has been writing to him for some of his work.

"He got part of the first two verses done last night, George, and Pa and me didn't think they were half bad. Sister Mayme and the old gent said they were fierce, but Mayme is jealous of Wilfred because a phrenologist, which come to our house last week, said that Wilfred was the brightest of the family, and the old gent is sore because Wilfred's saving hasn't is still lingering in the lap of Winter, as the poet says. But see what you think of the first verse, George. It goes like this:

"'Oh, temptress of a sovereign king
You're just a mean, deceiving thing.'

After abroad you've did so ill
You're coming here in vaudeville.
'Over you. Go back, you hussy!'
"Wilfred is a great kid, isn't he," said the Head Barber. "I know some great editor will be after him one of these days —with an axe."

A Long Walk Back

THIS is the latest darky wheeze, according to "Jimmie" Allison, who met a bunch from Kentucky the other night. "Down near Lexington," said Allison, "there is a haunted house. Naturally, the owner wanted to take the curse off his property, so one Sunday he hired old Sam, an enlightened negro, to sleep in the place that night. 'You know and I know there is no such thing as a ha'nt, Sam,' said he, 'and if there were, they can't do anything on Sunday. So I'll just leave you locked in with a quart of whiskey, and Monday morning I'll come for you with a wagon, and give you five dollars.'

So Sam was locked in. Monday morning the owner appeared with the wagon, but no Sam was to be found. There was a window missing from the house, though —sash and all. He followed Sam's trail through a little wood, by the saplings that had been bent down, and finally he reached the edge of the swamp. "That fool nigger," he said, "will get mired down there, if he don't look out. I'll come back this afternoon and get him."

But that afternoon he couldn't find Sam. Time went on, until he became seriously alarmed about the old fellow. On Thursday morning he got on his mule and took his hound dogs and started out to trail the runaway. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Thursday he found the old chap, completely exhausted. He was just able to drag a leg. "What's the matter with you, you fool nigger?" he demanded. "Here you go and lose out of my house Sunday night, destroying a good window completely. And here I find you out in the swamp. Where have you been all this time?"

"Laws, Marse Bob," said the negro, "I been comin' back since Tuesday night."

JORDAN MARSH CO.

A Will and a Way

"YOU can figure this idea out for yourself," says a local attorney. "It is one of the bits of common sense that, now and then makes me doubt the omniscience of the law. A client of mine wanted me to draw up his will. He was an old man who had married for the second time, and he had grown children by his first wife. Also, he had a big bunch of property. And his idea was to leave every cent he had to his second wife.

"It won't do at all," I advised him. 'Your children are going to make an awful fight to break such a will, and they are likely to be successful.'

"'That's just what I want to do,' answered my fool client. 'I want my children to have a full share of my money. That's why I bequeath everything to my wife. I know that wife of mine. And it's going to be a lot easier for my children to break my will than it is for me to break here.'"

A Dangerous Risk

HERE was a case where it seemed an if everything was settled. The insurance company's doctor had reported that the man seemed to be all right, and the man himself had certified that he was not engaged in any dangerous occupation.

"I lead a sedentary life," he told them. "I work in an office, and we have no danger or excitement."

"How about sports?" asked the examiner. "Do you play football? Baseball? Do you box? Belong to an athletic club?"

"No—none of that stuff. I guess I'm a safe risk."

"Do you scorch?"

"What do you mean?"

"Do you drive your car faster than the speed limit?"

"I have no car."

"What? How do you get about?

"I walk."

"Risk refused. A scorcher is a dangerous risk, but a pedestrian has no chance at all. Buy a cat, old chap. Sorry—good night."

The De Bercy Affair

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

MADEMOISELLE DE BERCY, a young woman of great beauty, has been slain in her rich apartments in the Feldsham Mansions. Rupert Osborne, her wealthy American suitor, is believed by all London to be the murderer. Scotland Yard, however, believes him innocent and advises him to hide in Tormouth, a seaside village.

Furneaux, the great detective, is unaccountably agitated when assigned to the case, and his chief, Inspector Winter, resolves to watch him.

Furneaux learns from Hylda Prout, Osborne's secretary, that a dagger and sabred, like the one used to kill Miss De Bercy, were missing from his private museum immediately after the murder.

Winter, tracking Furneaux, by his own subordinate, learns that he was in Osborne's house and in the museum the very day of the murder.

Detective Clarke, also on the case, finds a letter which tells how Mlle. De Bercy was marked for death as a traitress by an anarchist society.

Furneaux goes to visit Hylda Prout. He shows her a letter from Osborne, one of the stolen ones, with the name Rosalind written in Osborne's hand. By the flash of the electric light the color rises in her cheeks he knows she deeply loves Osborne.

Chief Winter learns a new thing from an municipal woman who says Osborne was quarreling with Miss De Bercy a short time before the crime.

Furneaux goes to Tormouth, finds Osborne posing as Mr. Glyn, breaks into his room and discovers a letter which shows he is deeply in love with Rosalind Marsh, a girl he met at the beach there.

Furneaux finds Hylda Prout a girl who knows will bring her to Tormouth. She comes, disguised as an old woman, and as such he makes her acquaintance, he himself posing as an elderly person by the name of Punch. They pair only overnight more in a garden in which Osborne and Rosalind are walking, and watch the former make love to the girl.

An Appointment

"I HAVE so much to say about ourselves! Where should I begin? And now that I have a few minutes I am throwing them away. Do you know, I never seem to secure you free from interruption. Either yourself or someone else intervenes every time and reduces me to silence and despair——"

Their words passed beyond earshot again in the other direction, and the lawn was wide between house and screen of shrubbery on the road front, it was some time before they were again heard. At last, though, they came, and then Rosalind's low tone of earnestness showed that this time, at least, Osborne had been listened to.

"I will, since you ask, since you wish"—her voice faltered—"to please you. You will be at the Abbey to-morrow night? And, since you say that you so—desire it, I may then hear what you have to say. Now I'll go."

"But when—where——?"

"If the night is fine, I will stroll into the gardens during the evening. You will see me when I go. On the south terrace of the Abbey there is a sun-dial in the middle of a paved Italian garden. I'll be there that way, and give you half an hour."

"Rosalind!"

"Ah, no—not yet."

Her lips sighed. She looked at him with a lingering tenderness languishing in her eyes.

"Can I help it?" he murmured, and his voice quivered with passion.

"Are you glad now?"

"Glad!"

"Good-by."

She left him hurriedly and sped with inimitable grace of motion across the lawn toward the house, and, while he looked after her, with the rapt vision of a man who has communed with a spirit, the two listeners crept to the little gate, slipped out when a laughing couple turned their heads, and walked back to the hotel.

The man said never a word. Mr. Pugh was full of chat and merriment, but no syllable fell from her tight-pressed lips.

The next day the lady was reported to have a headache—at any rate, she kept to her room, and saw no one save the "boots" of the establishment, with whom during the afternoon she had a lengthy interview upstairs. At about 7 in the evening she was writing these words:

Miss Marsh—Are you aware that the "Mr. Glyn" whom you know here is no other than Mr. Rupert Osborne, who is in everyone's mouth in connection with the Feldsham Mansions murder? You make take this as a positive fact from

"ONE WHO KNOWS."

She wrote it in a handwriting that was very different from her own, inclosed and directed it, and then, about half-past seven, sent for "boots" again.

Her instructions were quite explicit:

"Wait in the paved rose garden at the Abbey, the square sunken place with a sundial in the centre," she said. "It is on the south terrace, and the lady I have described will surely come. The moment she appears hand the note to her, and be off—above all else, answer no questions."

So the youth, with a sovereign in his pocket, hurried away to do Hylda Prout's will—or was it Furneaux's? Who might tell?

At the Sun-Dial

The messenger of evil had waited twenty minutes by the side of the sun-dial, when the lady came gliding round the corner from the front of the house, and saunter towards him. Moonlight lay weltering on the white walks of the terrace, on the white slabs of stone, on the water of the basin, on the surface of the lake eastward where the terrace of the terrace curved into the parkland that the wavelets lapped on. It weltered, too, on the lady's hair, deftly coiled and twisted into the coiffure of a Greek statue. It shimmered on the powdered blue of her gown that made her seem a little ghostly in that light, on the rows of pearls around her throat, and on the satin glove of her shoes. She made straight for the dial; and then, all at once, finding some unknown man keeping the tryst, half halted.

He ran out to her, touched his cap, saying "Miss Marsh," handed her the note, touched his cap again, and was going.

"From whom?" she called after him in some astonishment.

"Lady at the Swan, miss"—and he hurried off even more swiftly, for this was a question which he had answered quite enough.

She stood a little looking at the envelope, her breathing labored, an apprehension in her heart. Then, hearing the coming foot steps which she knew, she broke it open, and ran her eye over the few words.

Bending slightly, with the flood of the moon on the paper, she could easily read the plainly written message.

". . . The Mr. Glyn whom you know is no other than the Mr. Rupert Osborne who is in everyone's mouth in connection with the Feldsham Mansions Murder. . . ."

Now she laughed with a sudden catch of the breath, saying "Oh!" with a slight impatience of all anonymous scandalizers. But as her head rather swam and spun, she walked on quickly to the basin, and there found it necessary to sit down on the marble. The stab of pain passed in a few seconds, and again she sprang up and laughed as lightly as one of the little fountains in the basin that tossed its tinted drops to the moonbeams.

Not twenty yards away was Osborne coming to her.

She looked at him steadily—her marvelous eyes self-searching for sure semblance of the earnestness with which he had pleaded in favor of the lover of Rose de Bercy—how he had said that Osborne had already loved again; and how she, Rosalind—oh, how blind and deaf!—heedlessly had brushed aside his words, saying that a man of that mood was below being a topic. . . .

"Is it half an hour?" Osborne came whispering, with a bending of the body that was like an act of worship.

Her Eyes Flashed.

She smiled. In the moonlight he could not perceive how otherwise white was her face.

"It is one-half minute! . . . It was rather quixotic of you to have proposed, and of me to have accepted, such a meeting. But I felt sure that by this hour others would be strolling about the terraces. As it is, you see, we are pioneers without followers. So, till we meet again——"

She seemed to be about to hurry away without another word; he stood aghast.

"But, Rosalind——"

"What? How dare you call me Rosalind?"

Now her eyes flashed upon him. His sudden lightning from a dark blue sky, and the scorn in her voice blighted him.

"I—I don't understand," he stammered, trying in some despair. She drew her skirts aside with a disdain that was terrifying.

Then she laughed softly again; and was gone.

He looked after her as after treasure that one sees sinking into the sea, flashing in its descent to the depths. For one mad instant he had an impulse to run in with pursuit, but instead he gave way, sank down upon the edge of the marble basin, just where she had dropped a few brief seconds earlier, covered his face, and a groan that was half a sob broke so loudly from his throat that she heard it. She hesitated, nearly stopped, did not look round, scourged herself into resolution, and in another moment had turned the corner of the house and was lost to sight.

What had happened to change his Rosalind into this unapproachable empress Osborne was too stunned to ask himself explicitly. He knew he was banned, and that was enough. Deep in his sub-conscious ness he understood that somehow she had found out his wretched secret—found out that he was not the happy Glyn reeling through an insecure dream in fairyland, but the unhappy Osborne, heavily tangled in the coils of the evil conspirators.

And because he was unhappy and troubled she left him without pity, turned her back resolutely upon him. That hurt. As he stood up to walk away toward Tormouth a fierce anger and a gush of self-pity battled in his eyes.

He had no answer. He wandered on through the night, unseeing, stricken as never before. At last he reached the hotel, and as soon as he could summon the energy began to pack his portmanteau to go back to London. The day of the postponed inquest now loomed near, and he cared not a jot what became of him, only asking dumbly to be taken far from Tormouth.

Threw It from Him

As he was packing the sunnier of the days, he saw the scrap of blood-stained lace that Furneaux had already seen, had taken out, and had replaced. Osborne with that same feeling of repulsion with which Furneaux had thrust it away from him held it for a moment. What was it? How could it have got into his bag? he asked himself—a bit of lace stained with blood! His amazement knew no boundaries—could have been still more profound, if possible, had he seen Furneaux's singular act in replacing it in the bag after finding it.

He threw the horrible thing from him out of the window, and his very fingers tingled with disgust of it. But then came the disturbing thought that it could have been put into his bag as a trap? by the police, perhaps? And suppose any apparent eagerness of his to rid himself of it should be considered compromising? He was beginning to be circumspect now, timorous, ostentatious of that innocence in which a whole world disbelieved.

So he glanced out of the window, saw where the lace had dropped upon a sloping spread of turf in the hotel grounds, and ran down to get it. When he arrived at the spot where he had just seen it, the lace had disappeared.

When Man Wakes Up

He Will Find That He Is Away Behind Woman in Life's Big Parade

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

WHEN Man finally wakes up and realizes that so rapid has been the progress of Woman that he no longer rides in the band wagon, at the head of Life's Big Parade, calling attention to the freaks and marvels that follow, but is away back there in the rear dragging the tent poles, he will decide upon a grand revision.

He will, first of all, revise his opinion of women, and he will do this because he has to, and he will, in doing this, unconsciously revise himself; he born again to match the new conditions.

He will revise his views, his opinions, his habits and his jokes.

That which has seemed to him, in the past, to be stultifying wit, mistaken for brilliancy, he will find stupid, impotent and dull. He has laughed at Woman and her sins all his life. In this grand revision he will find he was really patting on cap and bells and laughing at himself.

Nothing in Old Joke

That oldtime joke about woman decorating the lamp posts of a town with drop stitches, painting lilies of the valley on the barns and hydrants, and making fire plugs a base for bird cages and flower pots, will cause no laughter when he remembers that women are busily clean, clean, making the most sanitary the most unsanitary of the towns of the South, and not a yard of ribbon or a crochet pattern in sight.

He will wonder that he ever dared to be a humorist when he reads that in West Orange, New Jersey, women had a cleaning bee that caused the town without cleaning up the city treasury.

Laugh at Right Things

He will see man shrink from the mammoth street sweeper he has always thought him to be, to a man out reaped with a broom, as an instrument of public utility compared with woman, and he will blush to think he ever regarded the ambition of woman as something to bring his wit on.

He will read that the women of Hunnewell, Kan., with a woman Mayor, a woman police Judge and women in private life helping, without hope of reward or future pull, are making Hunnewell a decent town; and he will find he hasn't been as funny as he thought he was.

All his crocheted, hand-painted, birdcage and drop-stitch jokes have been exploded years ago, and he will be left away behind the line parade, blinded and obscured by the dust, unless he wakes up to the new order of things.

It is a good thing to laugh; life has no better antidote. But he is without intelligence, wisdom or taste who laughs at the wrong thing.

The real joke is on the man who is dragging the tent poles.

The Game's the Thing

IT was the great event of the season—the final for one of the football magnates's namesbire. The rivals, who had hailed from Preston district, were the happy possessors of a good deal, and great was their regret on finding that the game was to be played on ground with scarcely a blade of grass visible.

Said one of the visitors, plaintively: "Why, there's hardly a blade of grass to be seen."

"Well," retorted one of the other team, "you ain't come to graze, are you?"

VERSATILITY

"They tell me your boy Josh is very versatile."

"He is," replied Farmer Corntassel, pridefully. "I never saw anybody who could do so many foot things without ruinin' 'em."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS MAY LIMIT CARS

STEEL IS FIRM ON THE MARKET

NEW YORK, May 26.—The stock market opened quiet but firm to-day, with a feeling of intense expectation relative to Steel shares in consequence of price cuts. Although U. S. Steel opened unchanged, the tone was firm. The fact was commented on that the U. S. Steel Corporation does not seem concerned regarding the future, otherwise it would not consider buying the ordinary shares of the Pittsburg Coal Company nor the Rieton Iron Works at this juncture.

The supply of stocks at the opening appeared to be small and there was also the opinion that the technical position of the market was much stronger. The bulk of the stock sold in the past few days was believed to have gone into strong hands.

The feared bear raid on steels following the announcement of the cut in steel prices was not in evidence in the early trading.

The following stocks showed gains at the opening: Amalgamated Copper ¼, Atchison ¼, St. Paul ¼, Reading ¼, American Smelting and Northern Pacific were unchanged. Reading was one of the strongest of the railroad group.

The Curb market opened active and firm. Trading was narrow in Americans in the London market, and there was a feeling of unsteadiness.

There was considerable covering in Canadian Pacific in London. Mexicans were quiet.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

IN SWEEPSTAKE

By J. C. KERRISON.

There is a lot of pessimistic talk on Steel, both on trade conditions and the investigation by the Stanley committee, but those who have the stock maintain a steadfast front. They are not easily moved by the antics of the bears.

$ $ $

That the financial temper of the country is becoming more optimistic every day is a well-known fact. In the most responsible banking circles the opinion is held that the market will have setbacks, but as these are to be expected there is no reason why they should cause surprise.

$ $ $

Some important operators say they will not go into the market at all until after Monday next. They say the market always is there and that no harm will be done by waiting. In the meantime the active professionals will keep the wheels moving and scalp out small profits whenever and wherever they can.

$ $ $

Engineers of high repute say that Porcupine will be a wonderful camp if its ore is quantities will average $5 and $6 gross in the crushings. They believe that Porcupine will be the centre of the world's attention before the year ends. Some of these mines will not be crushing, but there should be 500 stamps at work, producing at a profit of $10,000 a day or $3,650,000 a year. Any number of camps can show crushings of 250, and even $100 and upwards to the ton, but such properties are not going to count. There are no large bodies of ore in such camps. The average crushing in the Rand do not produce more than $4 or $5 per ton profit. The Rand has its thousands of stamps. One property alone runs 8000 stamps, and the gold production of the Rand last year was in round numbers $140,000,000.

Steel, naturally, would be the first to suffer from any accident to the crops. The old is high, is given as the reason for selling, but the crop scare is the real reason. This is the first crop scare of the season, and it is now discovered that some of the crops did not go into the ground under conditions as favorable as it went last year. As corn has not had time even in ground on millions of acres and as Winter wheat is already being harvested in Texas, there is nothing to warrant all the crop attention to justify alarm. There is nothing at all in the crop situation to cause apprehension on the part of investors.

It is interesting to know, in connection with the Union Pacific sale of $20,000,000 bonds and the double-tracking of its system through to the Pacific Coast, that the chieftains in Standard Oil was so displeased at the popular appreciation of the Government's warfare on Standard Oil that he opposed double-tracking of the system, and proposed that the burden should be made to suffer for mistreating the corporations. Other members of the board signified the Union Pacific would suffer more than the people if the double-tracking were abandoned. This even is this great railroad against the decision was technically in favor for the Union Pacific by its action in double-tracking is for renewed movement for prosperity.

For Breakfast Try "Sunkist" Oranges

Luscious Tree-Ripened Fruit

It is not sufficient to know that oranges are the most healthful of all fruits. It is also important to know the kind of oranges that are most healthful and most palatable. The very finest California oranges are now packed under the label "Sunkist." Please serve "Sunkist" oranges at breakfast tomorrow and learn the superiority of tree-ripened, juicy Sunkist oranges over the commonplace kind. Don't fail to save the wrappers.

There is so much "meat" and nourishment in "Sunkist" oranges and so little waste that, in addition to their extra fine flavor and goodness, they are really the most economical oranges to buy.

"Sunkist" Lemons Juiciest

Lemons differ as much as oranges. Pithy, thick-skinned lemons contain very little juice. You waste money when you buy them. Please ask for "Sunkist" Lemons and note how uniformly round and full of juice they are. Also note the age is skin and fiber.

Get This Valuable Orange Spoon

Send 12 "Sunkist" orange (or lemon) wrappers and send them to us, with 11 cents to pay charges, packing, etc., and we will present you with a genuine Rogers Orange Spoon, of beautiful design and highest quality. Basis saving wrappers; if you prefer to secure this one, send 12 "Sunkist" wrappers and 11 cents for each additional spoon. In remitting, please send cross-out stamps when the amount is less than 24 cents; on amounts above 24 cents, we prefer money order, express order or cash. We will not be responsible for cash sent to send you complete list of valuable premiums. We honor both "Sunkist" and Red Ball wrappers for premiums. (39)

Is Mr. Lodge Against the Reciprocity Treaty?

Does Senator Lodge, now that he thinks he is safely lodged behind a fresh six-year term in the Senate, propose to DEFY the deep and determined PUBLIC SENTIMENT in favor of Canadian reciprocity; a sentiment that has overflowed party lines, swept men from their party moorings and like a still flowing tide, will submerge everything which resists it.

Mr. Lodge appears to have joined the SENATORIAL CONSPIRACY to kill President Taft's reciprocity treaty.

The Democratic House has had sufficient statesmanship to approve of a Republican President's good treaty, because it is in the public interest. The Senate will not DARE to kill the treaty by a direct and open attack upon it. The conspirators proposed to ASSASSINATE it by amendments, and Senator Lodge has now offered an amendment.

He says that the amendment is in favor of the Gloucester fisherman. Even so. Is that a sufficient reason for putting a great trade treaty in jeopardy?

The fishermen who brave the storms and fogs of the Grand Banks are a gallant and picturesque class in our community. The hardship of their life and its small returns entitle them to unusual consideration.

But they are NOT the whole country, and it is incredible that in their interest Mr. Lodge should believe it proper to endanger a measure affecting two countries.

Nobody knows better than Mr. Lodge that exact justice is unattainable in tariff legislation. A refinement of justice may excuse Mr. Lodge's attitude, but when justice is so refined beyond reason, it is usually a cloak for a darker purpose.

To join with those who are offering amendments to the reciprocity treaty, when it is known that its danger lies in these very amendments, is a suitable CLIMAX to Mr. Lodge's whole attitude toward reciprocity during our campaign in Massachusetts.

The citizens of this State will remember that night after night from the stump he denounced the attempt to discuss reciprocity with Canada because Canada did not want reciprocity. Then he denounced it because it was inconsistent with the "most favored nations" clause in our treaties with other countries.

But Canada DOES want reciprocity and her cabinet has agreed to such a treaty. Moreover, we have not heard of the "most favored nation" clause, since President Taft negotiated the treaty.

Is Mr. Lodge now at his wit's end for further excuses? Does he resort to amendment because all other ways have failed?

Massachusetts WANTS reciprocity with Canada. In recent years her politics have been convulsed by this question and PUBLIC OPINION has overwhelmed those who opposed the reciprocity movement.

If Mr. Lodge stands athwart this Massachusetts sentiment he may not be deprived of the office in which he misrepresents her, but he will fill it WITHOUT HONOR and without power.

In the circumstances of Mr. Lodge's age and years of public life, few things can gratify him save the thought of honor and power and the name he will leave after him.

A Suggestion for the Secretary of the Navy

Investigate the Complaint of the Men at Camp Meyer in Cuba.

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner

This newspaper suggests that the Secretary of the Navy make an investigation as to dissatisfaction of enlisted men at Camp Meyer in Cuba.

It would not be difficult to prove that a certain official in charge of the men is overbearing and brutal and belongs to the type that encourages desertion from the army and navy.

We believe that the Navy Department will be glad to investigate this matter independently, reach its own conclusions and take action—and we prefer that course to any individual attack on the officer complained of, or the publication of many letters received concerning him and his attitude toward the men.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

BANGOR FIRE RAISES RENTS

Editor AMERICAN:

Deserving victims of the recent big fire, who are in distressed circumstances, have not been greatly helped by the charity fund, which has been heavily taxed by the dire needs of those who lost their all. Some of the real estate men have been showing keen "eyes for business," however, by raising rents and selecting only well-to-do tenants and tenants without children. Consequently the conditions are worse for the worthy poor whose possessions were burned up a few weeks ago.

Tenements that were renting for $10 a month before the fire now are "worth" $15 a month; $12 tenements are bringing $18; $13 are bringing $20, etc., and if you have any children you can sleep in the parks. I know of one workingman that lost everything. Three of his family were thrown out of work; after the fire he started out to find a place to shelter his little brood. At one place the landlady asked him: "Have you any children?" He answered "Yes." She replied: "Oh, well, we don't care to let you have the place, for now is a time we can pick our tenants and get our price."

Bangor has many noble and generous citizens, but some landlords here do not know the meaning of the words generosity and sympathy and affliction.

A FRIEND OF THE POOR.

COURTS AND THE TRUSTS

Editor AMERICAN:

The AMERICAN, as usual, has said the right word on the anti-trust decision. But what in the world is the use of a new law? This is only a little exaggeration of the ordinary judicial construction. The courts have four canons for interpreting a statute—a constitution. First and foremost, it does not mean what it says. Second, it does not say what it means. Third, it says what it does not mean. Last and chiefest, it means what it does not say. What possible statute can you run through that mill and have it come out with any of the original intent left?

You say that the word "reasonable" is not to be found in the Sherman act. Perhaps not totidem verbis, but it can easily be found totidem syllabis, or at any rate totidem litteris. If not by explication, at least by implication.

No new statute is needed. All that is required is for the executive to apply the court's own canons of interpretation when executing their decrees.

AN ORIGINAL "BROWNIE."

Editor AMERICAN:

I am one of the original "Brownies" and would offer my protest against asking anyone to pay for the privilege of sniffing the free air and enjoying the sunlight and the briny ocean over at the L street bath. I have swam in and around there for fifty-six years or more and can vouch for its great benefit to the human race. I have seen all kinds of sick men go there and come away much improved in health and spirits; in fact, men that you might say were born again. You cannot find anything that will cleanse you so well as a cold water "dip." It rids the mind of all impure thoughts; you feel as if you came from the River Jordan and were completely restored as in the miracles of old.

Stoughton, Mass. MURRY HILL.

A "RUBBER MILE" RATE?

Editor AMERICAN:

I offered a ticket marked Walnut Hill, Mass., to the conductor on a Woburn, Mass., train. He refused it, took my name and that of a witness. Now Walnut Hill is in Woburn, and twelve rides cost $1.35. Woburn is $1.30 for twelve rides. The question is: How far will the Boston & Maine go?

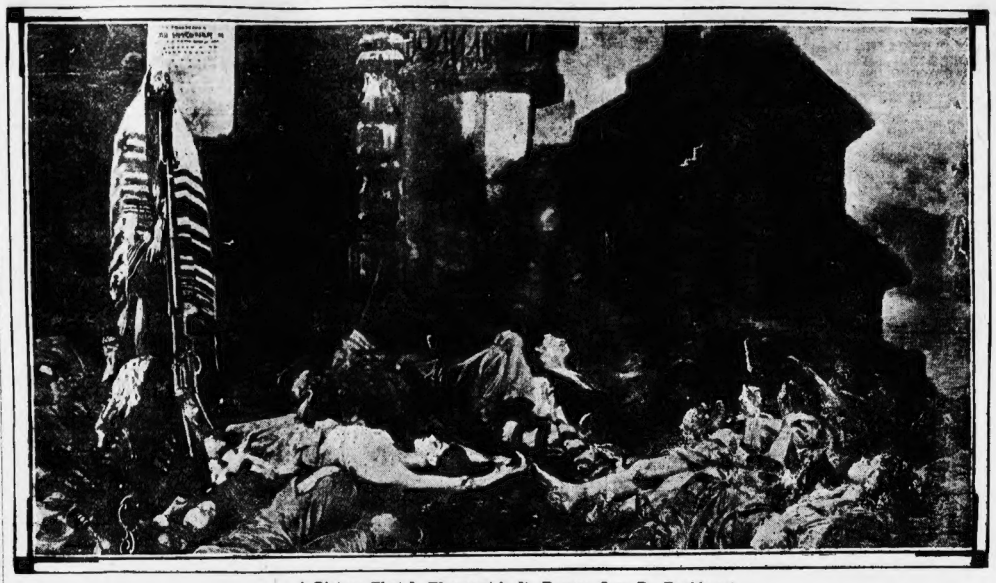
A PICTURE THAT TELLS A DREADFUL STORY

The Kieff Massacre, by Stanislaus Von Fabijanski

From Photograph of Painting by the Campbell Studios, Waldorf-Astoria, New York



A Picture That Is Eloquent in Its Power, Says Dr. Parkhurst

By DR. C. H. PARKHURST

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

THERE is in New York city a painting which, in spite of its realism, tells more of what we ought all to understand and appreciate at the present time than any number of paragraphs could do, however eloquently written.

It portrays a single scene from the Kieff massacre. The painting is by the Polish artist, Stanislaus von Fabijanski, is of large proportions, and was originally exhibited in the Glass Palace of Munich.

It is so severe an indictment of Russian barbarity that at the request of the Russian Government the officials of Bavaria had it removed.

We do not infer from that that there is any act of cruelty so fiendish that either the act itself or any artistic representation of it would occasion discomfort to a Russian officer.

People who are destitute of tender sensibilities are spared all such inconvenience. But Russia, geographically and commercially, has come sufficiently close to the civilized nations of Europe to know that the ruthless massacre of people, the unprovoked knifing of men and women, the strangling of babies and the cutting up of them alive is a style of civility that is not favorably considered by some of their contemporaries, whose respect, however, it would like to retain even though morally incompetent to appreciate their underlying sentiments.

The picture is powerful in its composition, ghastly in its details, and appealing in the way in which those details are made to testify to the suddenness and the horror of the event.

The very stillness in which lie the mangled heads, the contorted, stabbed and bleeding bodies of the victims create in the observer a sense of the demoniacal fury which had just been raging.

The devilishness of the performance is expressed especially in the posture of the rabbi who was one of the victims and whose corpse had been set up erect against the wall and supported by a musket. Some of the rabbi's blood had spattered the Czar's PEACE PROCLAMATION pasted upon the wall.

His pallid face, turned heavenward, still wore the aspect of plaintive resignation with which he yielded to the savagery of the soldiery. The face, once seen, is one not to be forgotten. It passes comprehension that creatures in human form can be found that are willing to do such work.

Devils are not an extinct race. And of Russian devils, the Czar is the responsible head.

Jesse Pomeroy's Letters to His Mother

The Jesse Pomeroy letters are among the most remarkable human documents ever published, or for that matter ever written. They are much more interesting than any study of this strange being that any criminologist could have penned after years of study of the man and his case.

These letters show to everybody what manner of man Pomeroy is when he thinks of his mother—his one and only friend through the many years he has existed in solitary confinement. They tell as nothing else could do what he thought about by day and night while he lived entombed in a living grave.

It is worth while for the public to get such an insight into the mind of a fellow-being who has been pictured only as a fiend incarnate. All that has been written about this man has tended to create the impression in the public mind that he is absolutely inhuman, or human only in form and faculties, a being without one redeeming trait which would make him worthy of any consideration from either his jailers or the society for whose good he was immured for life because it was believed he is as unsafe to allow at large as a venomous reptile would be in a crowded city street.

But if there is anybody in the world whom Pomeroy loves, or who has been able to inspire a human feeling in his mind, it is his aged mother—the parent who has believed in him and loved him, although the world hated and loathed him.

In these letters, penned to her in his dungeon at all hours, without thought, probably, that any eye but her's and the prison authorities would ever read them, Pomeroy has revealed whatever soul he has, and made unconsciously the strongest appeal he could possibly make for human sympathy. He has revealed in these letters that he is not, as many have been inclined to believe, a living embodiment of the doctrine of total depravity, but imbued with some feelings at least which make him kin to mankind at large.

These letters, printed in next Sunday's AMERICAN, are a wonderful tribute in themselves to the power of mother love. It is so potent it can even awake a soul so dormant that its possessor could murder and torture innocent children as a pastime.
